Nuclear Bomb Test Makes Radiation Belt Much Greater

Messages From 3 American Satellites are Knocked Out

WASHINGTON (AP)—The man-made radiation belt created by the U.S. high-altitude hydrogen bomb explosion on July 9 is much stronger than was anticipated and may persist for many years. Acknowledging this Saturday, the government said transmissions from three U.S. satellites have been knocked out. But the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department insisted the radiation holds no menace to the man-in-space program.

"The new radiation belt clearly lies above the path of currently manned flights and it will not constitute any hazard to manned satellite launchings that we have planned in the near future," a joint statement by the AEC and the Pentagon said.

Study Continues
The nuclear blast left behind a substantial and greater-than-anticipated increase in the intensity of the more distant natural Van Allen radiation belt, the announcement said.

It added, in effect, that this result is not fully understood and that the whole phenomenon is under careful continuing study.

Another result was to create a more or less new belt below the Van Allen belt, but this seems to be disappearing as expected, the statement said.

The new communications satellite Telstar has not suffered any apparent damage, the agencies said. In fact, the statement added, Telstar has sent back data which "permitted more detailed determination of the distribution and intensity of this radiation belt."

Telstar Safety Measure

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns Telstar, has said the pioneer relay satellite was deliberately designed with a big safety factor against heavy radiation. AT&T has said Telstar's 3,600 solar cells are covered with various types of shielding to test their effectiveness.

The new radiation belt is made up of energetic particles which damage unshielded silicon cells. These cells convert sunlight into the electricity used by many satellites.

It has been disclosed earlier last

West Won't Use Force to Raze Wall, Brandt Says

BERLIN (AP)—Mayor Willy Brandt told Berliners Saturday the Big Three Western powers will not use force to pull down the Communist wall through their city.

"The real guarantees have always just been for West Berlin," he said in a recorded radio address. "Whether we like it or not, never has a Western statesman—let alone an Eastern one—ever given a guarantee for the four-power status of all Berlin."

"Berliners have always had a sense of realism," the West Berlin leader said, "and they have always been sober. They want a four-power status, but they expect no miracles."

By the same token, Brandt went on, the Russians have no more rights in West Berlin than the West has in East Berlin.

Postmen Help Raise Funds for Stricken Family at Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—Postmen rang twice at homes in the Berlin area this week.

The second ring was made by the postmen on their own time as they helped in the drive for funds for the tragically beset Louis Drover family. About $5,000 has been raised.

Chairman of the drive is Berlin postmaster Frank J. Alberts.

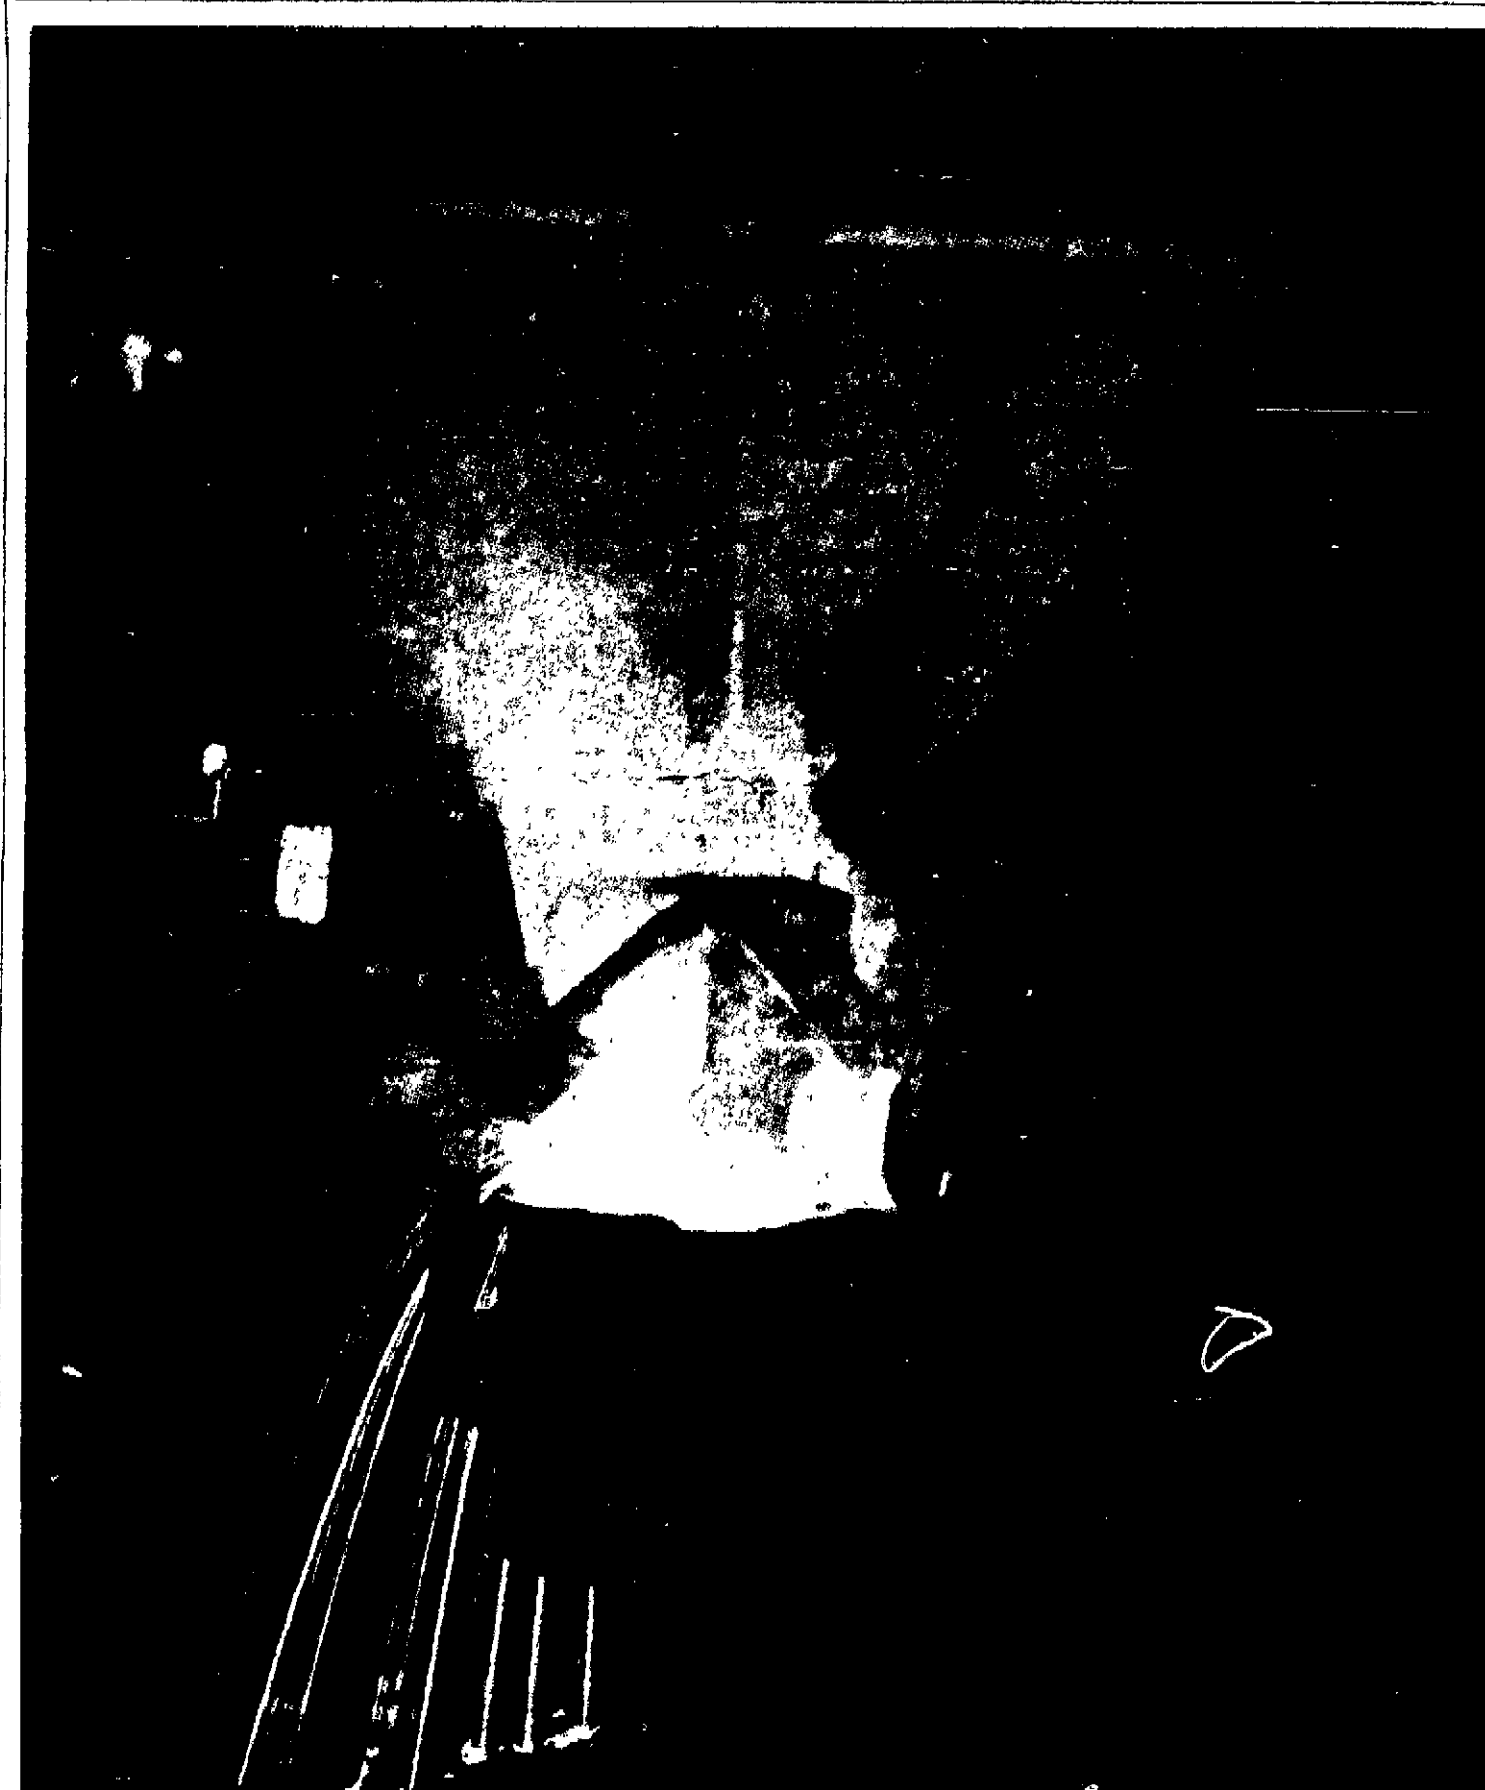

The drive was started to help Louis Drover meet his many bills brought about by the deaths of a son, William, in an automobile accident last month and for hospital care for his daughter, Donna, 16, who was burned critically July 2.

Donna was burned over 50 percent of her body while trying to light a fire with gasoline in the back yard of her home. She has been hospitalized for two months but is recovering.

No Early Report On Estes Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators investigating alleged political influence in the Billie Sol Estes deals said Saturday they doubt they can hand down a verdict before the November elections.

Democratic and Republican members of the Senate investigation subcommittee said in separate interviews they would be surprised if writing a report of findings is completed that early.

But they did not rule out the possibility they indicated much would depend on how long Congress remains in session and how soon the hearings can be concluded. They expect to hand down a sharply one

Louisiana School to Reopen Next Tuesday

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—Archbishop John P. Cody said Saturday the Catholic Elementary School in Buras, desegregated on opening day last Wednesday, will reopen Tuesday.

The Our Lady of Good Harbor School was the first parochial grade school desegregated in Louisiana when five Negroes went to class. The next day the Negroes stayed home and officials closed the school Friday, saying they feared violence.

White pickets outside the school protesting the desegregation grew in number from 50 the first day to more than 100 by Thursday.

Post-Crescent Poll Predicts Close Vote in Kuehn-Renk Race

Madison Bureau Chief Reports Endorsed Candidate in Lead

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Philip Kuehn of the volunteer Republican state organization, is the favorite to win the Republican nomination for governor in the Sept. 11 primary election, but the contest with Wilbur Renk may be a close one

That is the conclusion reached in a survey by the Appleton Post-Crescent Madison bureau of politicians and newspaper observers throughout Wisconsin.

From all corners of the state come reports that the drive by Renk, a prominent Dane County farmer, to upset the Republican convention endorsement by a direct appeal to Republican voters in the primary election has shown a vigor and impact that had not been expected.

Renk's campaign has apparently been especially effective in the rural counties. Renk is likely to carry many of the agricultural districts. His problem is to attract backing in the larger voting centers, where his lack of organization has been a heavy handicap. Kuehn is expected to get a lead in big Milwaukee County, where the Republican vote may be less than that cast by the Democrats, but where it is sizeable enough to offset losses in the smaller rural counties and small cities.

Hurt Renk

A third candidate in the contest, Robert LaFollette Sucher of Madison, has made a negligible impression. His only importance, as politicians and reporters see it, almost without exception, is that such votes as he may attract will be hurtful to Renk since they would otherwise have gone to him as against Kuehn the party regular.

The most important of the imponderable factors in the primary balloting is the size of the Democratic cross-over vote. Democrats have historically tended to vote in Republican primaries in substantial numbers. Renk has openly solicited such backing. Democratic observers believe that local contests in Milwaukee County will deter a substantial Democratic cross-over there, but in other communities they are not so sure.

In Madison, for example, in the big University of Wisconsin community and elsewhere the Democrats are openly friendly to the Sun Prairie man who formerly served as a member of the University of Wisconsin board of regents.

Kuehn's two most important assets are his backing by a statewide party organization that is probably in better mechanical condition than it has been for some time, and the fact that he made a comparatively good showing in the campaign against Gov. Gaylord Nelson two years ago and has some statewide acquaintance and name familiarity as a result. Renk has never been on the ballot before.

Knowles Defeat

In the early stages of the campaign there were fears within the party organization that Kuehn's narrow defeat of popular Lt. Gov. Warren P. Knowles in a convention endorsement ballot would drive Knowles' friends into the Renk camp. Renk has obviously gained some supporters from the party men who wanted Knowles to lead the ticket this year, but the lieutenant governor

Regular Army Troops Hit Guerrilla Defense Posts 75 Miles From Capital

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)—Algerian regular army forces loyal to Ahmed Ben Bella smashed into guerrilla defense positions 75 miles from Algiers on Saturday and bloody fighting was in progress, the guerrilla command here announced Saturday night.

The clashes threatened to push this two-month-old nation into an all-out civil war.

A guerrilla spokesman of Wilaya (zone) 4 said the Soviet-equipped army units — under orders to wrest control of Algiers for Ben Bella's Political Bureau — struck at four areas in the south and southeast in an apparent drive toward the capital.

The spokesman said army units also were advancing along the main Oran-Algiers highway from Orleansville, about 100 miles southwest of here. But there were no reports of fighting there, the announcement said.

Barricades Erected

In Algiers, shabbily uniformed troops of Wilaya 4 hastily threw up sandbag and barbed wire barriers as they dug in to defend the capital. Defensive measures also were being taken in a perimeter outside this coastal city.

Muslim civilians started forming demonstrations against civil war just minutes after the guerrilla command announced clashes at Boghari, 75 miles south of Algiers, and at Ain Boucif, Sidi Aissa and Ain Hejina—three guerrilla-held outposts 75 miles south-east of the capital on the main east-west highway.

Municipal authorities in Boghari said in a telephone conversation that machine gun and mortar fire could be heard clearly south of that city.

Announcement Surprise

Radio Algiers called on the population to mass in the streets in a demonstration against the Ben Bella forces. The leftist Ben Bella and his Political Bureau closed up shop in Algiers a week ago after

Typhoon Takes Heavy Toll At Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP)—Typhoon Wanda swooped down on this refugee crowded British colony Saturday and in a few nightmarish hours left at least 39 persons dead, 13 missing, 397 injured and more than 10,000 homeless.

Rescue workers still digging into flooded and demolished homes late Saturday night feared the death toll could be doubled before their grim task was completed.

It was the most destructive typhoon to hit Hong Kong in a quarter century.

Damage In Millions

Damage—still unestimated—is expected to run into millions of dollars.

The Royal Observatory said Wanda drenched the colony, which had been suffering its worst drought in 50 years, with six inches of rain in 16 hours.

Wanda's savage winds, with peak gusts of 160 miles an hour, also triggered a six-foot tide that left half of Shatin, a small satellite town near the Chinese Communist border, under water. Shatin star is Arcturus.

Sun sets at 7:29 p. m., rises Monday at 6:18 a. m. Moon sets at 9:23 p. m. Prominent star is Arcturus.

Mediator Aims at Early Strike End

Both Sides Ready for Added Talks

CHICAGO (AP)—A government mediator striving for a Labor Day weekend settlement of the telegraphers strike on the 10,000-mile Chicago and North Western Railway, got both sides into negotiations Saturday and reported the talks are proceeding on a friendly basis.

The mediator, Francis A. O'Neill Jr. of the National Mediation Board, said no great progress was made at the session but that both sides had agreed to resume negotiations Sunday.

O'Neill said recommendations made in April by a presidential emergency board set up to study the controversy were the chief point of discussion Saturday. The board recommended the telegraphers union withdraw its demand that telegraphers jobs be frozen at the 1957 level but that the railroads should adopt a comprehensive program of protection for displaced workers.

Separate Meetings

The mediator said the union and the railroad representatives will hold separate caucuses in advance of Sunday's joint meeting.

The stoppage came Thursday morning when 1,000 members of the telegraphers union left their jobs to back their four-year campaign for elimination of telegrapher jobs in a railroad modernization and economy program.

One of the carriers 15,000 other employees refused to cross the telegraphers picket lines.

The immediate impact was felt by 35,000 Chicago commuters bused to and from work daily by the railroad. They found other means of transport available, if crowded and less convenient for their needs.

The Labor Day weekend lessened the effects, but the tie-up ended the prospect of critical blockage in shipment of the new wheat crop, the heavy flow of pulp and paper products from Wisconsin mills, the movement of heavy machinery and steel shipments, and the commerce flow to and from Lake Michigan port facilities. The railroad serves a nine-state Midwest area.

Public works and defense projects were affected by supply problems, resulting from the strike and layoffs were threatened in many factories and on railroads connecting with the North West.

The stubborn job issue of the strike is a facet of a widespread problem in industry. In Chicago, the union is also the loss of job benefits of technical improvements.

Two Missing as Boat Sinks in Lake Michigan

ST. PAULS, Minn. (AP)—A prominent Indianapolis lawyer was missing and presumed dead Saturday in northern Lake Michigan fishing trippers. A second person was missing.

The missing are John K. Fickelham, 60, and Elmer Fickelham, 62, of Elmhurst, Ill., who were fishing from a boat.

Fickelham's son, William, 70, Don Mosman, 33, and Lucille Clark, 27, of Elmhurst, 26-foot cabin cruiser and set out from Petoskey, Friday, to bass fish off Hog Island, five and a half miles northeast of this Beaver Island port.

Mosman is a prominent lawyer. When Fickelham wife had received word from him at 10:30 p.m. she notified the Coast Guard.

An airplane search proved fruitless. But at 4:45 break a plane from the Traverse City Coast Guard Station, spotted young Mosman, his wife and Clark on Hog Island.

The Coast Guard said it believes that a small life raft was blown to the shore. It said the bodies of the two missing were seen Saturday morning. The bodies were seen Saturday morning. The bodies were seen Saturday morning.

Johnson and Greek Leader Discuss Aid

U. S. Vice President Takes Part in Village Celebration

BY PHIL DOPOLOUS

ATHENS (AP)—Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson discussed sensitive U.S. aid problems with Greek leaders Saturday, then ventured into the countryside to eat lamb on a spit, taste local wine and dance with girls in native dress.

About 8,000 inhabitants of the village of Koropi turned out to follow Johnson and his wife Lady Bird through the community.

The Johnsons paused to sample the local fare and do the kalamatianos—the national folk dance—with village belles attired in colorful traditional costumes.

The vice president also visited the village of Patra, birthplace of Demosthenes, the orator famous in ancient Greek history.

Johnson paused at the village square in a gesture of tribute before a statue of Demosthenes.

Earlier the vice president did some fence mending in his first official talks with Greek leaders who had been disappointed by a cut in American aid.

"I'm satisfied with this morning's talks," said Premier Constantine Karamanlis after conferring 90 minutes with Johnson. The American vice president showed a great understanding of our problems.

"We agreed there was a strong and lasting friendship between Greece and the United States and that we should face our problems together shoulder to shoulder," said Johnson as he and Karamanlis met newsmen following their conference.

On the surface, Greek and American relations are as sunny as the Athenian sky. Down deep, they are still close allies. But Greeks cannot hide their disappointment at a $20 million cut or denied U.S. aid last month.

Karamanlis, a leading Athens daily that often reflects government opinion, greeted Johnson on his arrival here Friday with an editorial saying the Greek in the street finds it difficult to realize that a country like the United States cannot afford $20 million.

Caramanlis' government had been counting on the money for its development programs.

Humphrey Lashes at GOP for Attacks on Kennedy's Policies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., accused Republican leaders Saturday of showing election-year irresponsibility by attacking President Kennedy's foreign and defense policies.

Senate Republican leader, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, replied that this charge is absolutely without foundation. He added that any Republican would be a fool to say or do anything for political gain that would endanger national security.

Humphrey, the deputy Senate Democratic leader, said in a statement that House Minority Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana had violated all rules of responsible politics and responsible leadership in criticizing an administration nuclear test-ban proposal.

He said Halleck resorted to misrepresentations and half truths in charges that the administration was retreating from its inspection demands.

Bureaucratic Pitfalls Plague Fidel Castro's Government, Too

Dirty Milk Bottles, Expensive Hot Water, Hoarding of Scarce Items Causes Woes

RY DOM BONAFIDE

Chicago Daily News Service

MIAMI—Aspects of the Cuban Revolution contain a bitter sweet humor, not unlike actor Charlie Chaplin trying to maintain a vestige of dignity in a battered derby and worn frock coat.

For instance, there are indications that the government of Fidel Castro is loaded with the same bureaucratic pitfalls as the capitalist system.

Recently, Havana Radio broadcaster Mario Kuchilan told his listeners: "I have a complaint here from a comrade on this newscast who gets delivery of a liter of milk in his house every day. However, this bottle of milk has a lot of garbage at the bottom. That is, it is dirty."

This comrade of ours went to talk to the official in charge of environmental health in the ministry of public health and this official told him to go to the Consolidated Enterprise for Dairy Products with his bottle of milk with garbage at the bottom.

Price of Water

"At the Consolidated Enterprises they told him to go somewhere else. Meanwhile, back at his house he keeps getting his milk bottle with a filthy residue inside. This unsanitary cannot continue in order to settle a problem as elementary as washing out milk bottles."

The same commentator told of a comrade protesting because a Valadero Hotel charged him 10 centavos for a cup of hot water. The value of Cuban money fluctuates wildly but a centavo is usually worth from one-tenth to 15 hundredths of a cent.

"I think that's kind of expensive for water, even though it is hot," said Kuchilan. "After all, it should not be charged in a restaurant for the workers which belongs to the workers. Workers should be treated as workers."

Hoarding Is Crime

With the scarcity of consumer goods in Cuba today, hoarding has become a crime against the people's economy. The official Gazette noted that Havana merchant Julian Mendez Alvarez was arrested for concealing a large quantity of Spanish sausages.

Three other grocers were fined 120 pesos each for hoarding 60 two-peso installments after 76 bars of soap were found in their possession. (A peso is worth from 10 to 15 cents.)

The Cuban Ministry of Industries recently announced that because of a shortage of necessary ingredients the production of artificially flavored soft drinks was being temporarily discontinued.

In the meantime, the agency reported the public would have to drink lemonade.

Castro also apparently plans to start indoctrinating the animal kingdom.

The Official Gazette said that all assets, animals and equipment of the Havana and Santiago zoos and the national aquarium are to be turned over to the government-controlled Academy of Sciences.

It now appears there is a sub-urban in Castro's utopia. The refuge, United States may host of its Levittown and similar develop in Cuba but I hope they will permit — but trumpets. Radio comes!

President Asserts He Has Strong Feelings About Wall

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—President Kennedy said Saturday he shares the strong feelings of the joint Senate House Republican leadership about the Communist wall in Berlin.

The President, replying to a letter signed by Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., and Rep. Charles A. Halleck, R-Ind., and others, said their suggestions — that the United States make great propaganda use of what the Russians are doing at the wall — were constructive.

The President sent them also memorandum in prepared for him by the U.S. Information Agency detailing its efforts in making the facts about the wall known throughout the world.

The President said he is sure the Republican leaders will agree with him that the memorandum of U.S.A. efforts "shows an energetic effort and a gratifying response."

"If after studying this memorandum you have further suggestions to make, I would be glad to have them," the President said.

"It is important to peace and to the freedom of the brave people of West Berlin that it be understood in every capital that on this matter we as a nation are united in our determination," he asserted.

The USA memorandum listed broadcasts, documentary film and newsreels in 10 languages all dealing with Berlin, which it distributed to 101 countries and which it said were seen by millions of people.

BY ANTHONY WHITE BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—Unshaven, worried men loiter about Belfast's windy street corners.

Northern Ireland has 38,000 jobless men—a twelfth of the total labor force. Nearly half have had no job for three months. One in 10 hasn't had steady work in two years.

The shipbuilding and textile industries, foundations of Northern Ireland's economy, are in decline. The aircraft industry is sick. The linen industry is a shadow of past pre-eminence.

Ulstermen seek healthy new industries, foundations of Northern Ireland's economy. A government team has the job of selling Northern Ireland as a site for American industry.

American Firms

Already 16 American firms have moved in, attracted by cut-rate offers. At least 3,000 Ulstermen are employed in these industries, ranging from nylon stockings to machine tools.

"There are still quite a number of American firms sitting on the fence," said one spokesman.

"What's holding them back is the Common Market negotiations. If Britain does join, Ulster surely will become an even more attractive proposition for American industry wanting to move its operations closer to the European market."

American enterprises operating new plants include Hughes Tool, Monsanto du Pont, National Distillers, International Telephone and Telegraph.

$70 Million

These companies, and others like them, have invested about $70 million in Ulster, the British-ruled northern corner of Ireland.

The sports goods firm of Spalding is established in Monks-town, in County Antrim. Not far away, at Carrmonee, Camco of Houston, Tex., is turning out oil well drilling equipment.

To the south, at Newry in lovely County Down, the New York firm of T. J. Stevenson and Co. employs hundreds of people in its big cotton and rayon-spinning plant. The old skills of the Irish textile workers count well here.

On the coast of County Down, at Bangor, Oneida Ltd., produces cutlery.

In Belfast Norton Tool Co. turns out industrial abrasives.

This area, with a population of less than 1½ million, hails its advantages in brochures and statistics.

It has this reserve pool of idle labor, much of it highly skilled and talking English—their own brand of richly rounded English.

You can move in, build your factory and equip it. The government will pay a third of what you spend, subject to an annual limit. Or there's the package deal

The new alphabet contains 24 of the 26 traditional letters and 19 new ones. Missing are "A" and "X" and included are new characters to provide for every sound in the English language.

The new alphabet doesn't remain with the children as they grow up. Its purpose is to teach Johnny how to read. Then, he switches over to the old-fashioned alphabet and reads along with confidence.

Switch Spelling

The transition from the new to the old way of spelling comes more quickly than anticipated, AR supporters say.

A visit to the Roxeth Primary School is a fascinating experience.

Tots read with glee and eagerness. They read in English from characters on the blackboard that look like archaic print.

The new alphabet contains no capitals. "Wuns upon a tiem" starts most fairy stories. There are "silk appls" to use in counting.

One Sound

In the new alphabet each letter represents one sound only. "Th" has two forms—a soft sound as in "think" and a hard one as in "the." The soft one has the tail "t" extended below the line. The hard "t" has its tail turned to the left. There are many new characters combining two of the old ones.

Yeates said that children who have changed over to traditional spelling can be handed a book in the regular alphabet and they read fluently.

"The children are able to read a year earlier than usual," he said. "They are far in advance of the standard expected of children using traditional spelling."

In Family

Sir James, a member of Parliament, is the grandson of Sir Isaac Pitman (1813-1897), the shorthand pioneer.

"A.R. is all my grandfather's work, really," said Sir James. "This A.R. system was to reform spelling for adults. I'm only interested in teaching children to read."

The augmented Roman alphabet was introduced in Britain a year ago. Some 1,000 children aged 4, 5 and 6 are the guinea pigs.

U. S. Copters Bring Aid To Korean Flood Area

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—Two U.S. Army helicopters began airlifting relief supplies Friday to the flood-stricken city of Suncheon in southern Korea.

The rain-swollen Nam River broke through a dike and roared through the city Wednesday, killing at least 150 persons. More than 10,000 residents were left homeless.

The government will build a factory, up to 300,000 square feet, and rent it to you. The government makes a financial grant to wards labor training and a machinery grant as well.

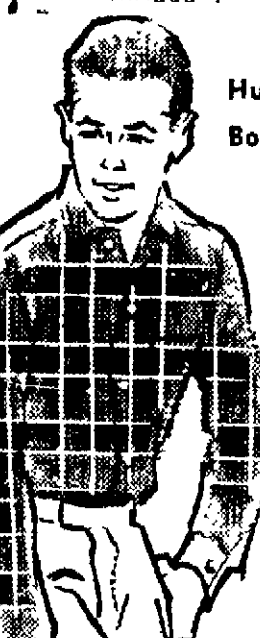

"And after that," officials say, "we leave you alone. There's no government meddling. No hidden strings. All we ask is that you try to reach a certain employment target."

How's That Again?

There was a curious construction in the public declaration of Philip F. LaFollette, former governor and former commander of the ill-fated Wisconsin Progressive party, that he intends to cast his vote for Wilbur Renk in the Republican primary contest for governor.

Among his reasons, said Mr. LaFollette, is Mr. Renk's "decade-long interest in public education."

This is a strangely restrained testimonial. The reference apparently is to the fact that Mr. Renk served for a while as a member of the state university board of regents. But "decade-long interest"? Mr. Renk is 54 years of age. Most men have devoted more years to Parent-Teacher Associations. There must be hundreds of men and women in the state who have spent as much time or more in local school board service. This is faint praise, indeed, from a man with such a background in Wisconsin governmental affairs as Mr. LaFollette.

Reapportionment Is Not a Simple Matter

Emmert L. Wingert, a Madison attorney, who acted as special master for the 3-judge federal court in the investigation of the reapportionment case brought by Atty. Gen. John Reynolds, in his report to the court mentioned some of the inconsistencies which exist under the present reapportionment plan. He said that "under the present districting in Wisconsin, the smallest 51 Assembly districts in population have 40 per cent of the total population of the state; the smallest 17 Senate districts in population have 42.5 per cent of the total population. Thus a majority of the members of the Assembly represent 40 per cent of the total population of the state while a majority of the members of the Senate represent 42.5 per cent of the total population."

This is one of the items marked by the attorney general for special emphasis when he mailed out copies of the court's decision dismissing his suit. It does seem that adjustments could be made to provide a majority of the people with a majority of the representation. However, as has been pointed out many times, the provisions in the Wisconsin constitution, that Assembly districts be bounded by county, town or ward lines and be in as compact a form as practicable; that both Assembly and Senate districts consist of contiguous territory; and that no Assembly district be divided by the formation of a Senate district, make it impossible to have the districts divided exactly on a population basis. This fact was also carried in Special Master Wingert's report but was not emphasized by the attorney general. However, it has been emphasized and explained in detail in a paper prepared by D. Russell Wartinbee, Assemblyman 1st District, LaCrosse County.

Wartinbee points out that the 1960 population of Wisconsin was 3,952,765. Since there are 100 members of the State Assembly the ideal district, if this were possible, would include 39,528 people.

Wartinbee points out that when Gov. Nelson vetoed the reapportionment bill passed by the legislature, one of his most important reasons was that the Assembly representation of Milwaukee County remained at 24 seats, as it had been in the past, in spite of the fact that the county had a population increase of 164,994 between 1950 and 1960. The Milwaukee County Democrats were insisting that since Milwaukee County has 26 per cent of the state's population, it should have 26 of the 100 seats in the state legislature.

Fighting the Dutch Elm Disease

The city of Milwaukee has lost 2,053 trees to the Dutch elm disease this year in spite of a program of spraying healthy trees and removing diseased ones. It is expected that the total loss this year will be approximately 2,250 compared with 1,365 last year.

The same story is being reported by many other communities in the vicinity of Milwaukee.

Gordon Z. Rayner, Milwaukee's city forester, says that the outbreak of the disease in some areas has been puzzling. However, he is confident that without the control program, which is costing Milwaukee and its suburbs thousands of dollars, there would have been a much greater loss. Some have warned that the continuing spread of the disease may be due to the importation of elm logs for burning in fireplaces. Dead elm wood with the bark on it is a breeding place for the elm bark beetle which spreads the disease. Rayner advises anyone who wants to use elm wood for a fireplace or for any other reason, to strip the bark from the wood.

George Hafstad, Madison, a plant pathologist for the State Agricultural Department's Plant Industry Division, says that tree removal and spraying will only limit the destruction. They do not stop it. Without a program, losses would multiply far above those now being incurred, he said. While the losses in Milwaukee are high, they are not nearly as bad as those in Bloomington, Ill., for example, where Hafstad said 90 per cent of the elms have been lost.

The Dutch elm disease has not arrived in Appleton as yet, but it is coming. City workers have done a lot of work in the way of cleaning up the dead wood around elms on the city streets but one should consider the fact that Milwaukee and its suburban cities and villages, after fighting this disease for several years, now have come to the conclusion that they need to do more than they have been doing. Most are seriously considering expanding their spray program from the streets and publicly owned property to elms on private property. The plan would be to charge the owner for the spraying and attach the bill to the tax bill. The experience in Milwaukee and the suburbs indicates strongly that this is about the only possible way to save the trees. Perhaps Appleton should not wait until it has lost a good share of its elms before deciding to take this sensible means of fighting the disease when it becomes necessary.

Quite obviously the city could contract to have this work done more efficiently and much more cheaply than could the individual property owner. There should be only limited objection to the plan because the property owner can not escape the cost whether he sprays or not. It frequently has been pointed out that the cost of removal of the trees is much more than the cost of spraying. If the city were prepared in advance to proceed with such a program it is quite possible that it could get by with a very limited loss from this disease which is almost certainly coming.

Any bureaucrat who will curb wasteful government expenditures deserves a suitable national award. A prime candidate is Najeeb E. Halaby, head of the

That is Amon Carter field, midway between Dallas and Fort Worth, which can serve both cities nicely. There is open space around it for expansion and keeping approach areas clear. It has longer runways than Love field and is served by the same seven air lines.

Love field is just inside Dallas city limits. It is closely hemmed in by residential areas. It belongs to Dallas. Amon Carter field belongs to Fort Worth. That city would be willing now to

County Humane Society Should Have Been Called for Injured Dog

Editor, Post-Crescent:

To writer, "Interested Voter" letter published Aug. 28, and other interested voters, pet lovers and citizens:

Had the good neighbor called the Outagamie County Humane Society instead of the sheriff's department to take care of the "poor, whimpering collie dog" which was shot and left lying in the road, a representative of the society would have appeared promptly to take the dog to its shelter where, if the dog were unclaimed, the little boy upon making a nominal payment

"could have had him" or his choice of many other fine pets which at the rate of about 50 a week are handled at its shelter by the Humane Society.

This is our business and our contribution to the Community from which we desperately need help to finance our new and enlarged shelter now being built on city property near Mackville. Donations are tax-exempt and will be gratefully acknowledged when mailed to Pearl D. Fellows, secretary-treasurer, 314 E. Lincoln St., Appleton.

Sheriff Reports on Injured Dog Incident

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I do not feel that your Peoples Forum should be used as a political battle field and I do not make a practice of engaging in controversy with anyone using this media to express their opinions even though they are usually adverse, biased and groundless insinuations fabricated by the type of person who is always trying to create something wrong where no wrong exists. However, I do feel that the assortment of insinuations and falsehoods contained in the letter from "An Interested Voter" concerning a dog that was disposed of on Highway 96 deserves an answer and I would like to set out the events as they were reported to me as having occurred and let your readers judge for themselves if the officer acted in a proper manner.

On Saturday afternoon, Aug. 25, at 1:30 p.m., the desk man on duty received a phone call from a lady (name withheld) stating that there was an injured dog aside the road at an empty lot next to 3615 E. Wisconsin Road. She thought the dog had been struck by a car. At 1:33 p.m. Officer Janssen was advised by radio of this situation and sent to the location to dispose of the matter. At 1:35 p.m., the officer arrived at the scene and states he met a woman resident of the neighborhood who told him she didn't know where the dog was from or to whom it belonged. The dog was about twelve to fifteen feet off the roadway in some bushes on an empty lot. He stated that it appeared to be in agony and was whimpering constantly. The dog was unable to move. In his opinion, it was injured severely and internally. The dog's tongue was hanging out and was completely dry and the animal was covered with flies. A gentleman from across the street stated that the dog must have been hurt the day before as they had heard whimpering through the night, but assumed that someone in the neighborhood had gotten a new puppy and that it was crying.

Under the circumstances, and unable to find anyone to claim the dog; and, inasmuch as the dog was unlicensed, the officer decided to dispatch the dog and he fired one shot through its head. At 1:45 p.m., he advised the office by radio that the dog was dispatched and that the County Highway Department should be advised to pick up the animal. He gave the location again and pointed out it was well off the road and in some bushes. This is in accordance with standard procedure that the County Highway Department is notified of all dead animals such as dogs, cats, etc., that are found along the highway and they in turn pick up the animals in one of their trucks and dispose of the carcass.

At 1:48 p.m., the office advised Officer Janssen by radio that the County Highway Department had been notified and they stated they would pick up the animal during the afternoon. At that point, the matter was considered settled.

I feel the officers performed their duty properly and that Officer Janssen did the only humane thing he could under the circumstances existing. I hope that this true account of this incident will relieve the unjust and undue criticism directed at the Outagamie County Sheriff and Police Departments and especially at the officers directly involved in this matter.

Robert F. Heinrich, Sheriff Outagamie County

Negative Criticism Can Help a Play

Editor, Post-Crescent:

If our good friends and neighbors, Ken Anderson and the Riverside Players, have a quarrel with Jay Joslyn and the Post-Crescent, I'm heartily in favor of their making it public. I just want to make it clear that I don't go along with Ken when he doubts "that negative criticism of amateur theatre is ever justified."

Even if it means that we of the Attic Theatre may get badly hurt again (we did, several times in the early years), we want the reviewer to feel free, freer each season, to express his opinions, justifiable or not.

I suggest that a critic should go easy with beginning groups. But that, later on, more penetrating criticism can be a compliment to the increasing maturity of an amateur group. After a time, unvaryingly pretty reviews don't even boost the actors' morale. And they make pallid — and untrustworthy — publicity.

Ryskind Goes Constructive

Asks Schlesinger be Retrained As Mechanic; He'd be a Smash

BY MORRIE RYSKIND

I can fool some of the people some of the time — but not the liberals. These are tough customers who not only refuse to buy any of my mere h andise, but insist on picketing the store and displaying h a n n e r s labeled "Unfair — destructive criticism."

And they write bitter letters to the Better Business Bureau, to the editors and to me about the shoddiness of my wares. A typical note — this one from the head of a savings and loan institution to which I have entrusted some of my ill-gotten dollars — reads, "All right, I concede Mr. Kennedy is not a compound of the best of Socrates, Solomon and George Washington. But why don't you, in all fairness, attack the stupidities of the various Republican administrations?"

If it'll make him happier, I'll readily admit that U. S. Grant was not our ablest executive and that Teapot Dome was an outrage. But I thought the subject under discussion was the current show starring the Kennedys. Since when does a critic review a play by writing, "While this work has little merit, I recall another offering of some years ago that wasn't so hot, either. It was written by a Republican, and its performance never lived up to its gaudy promises?" and go on to analyze the defects of the extinct drama? His job is,

Grant Not Able

I can only guess at the volume of letters he must have received from bitter playwrights and their followers with this refrain: "If you know so bloody much about plays, why don't you write one?" Englishmen are slow to anger, but the taunts finally got under his skin after 46 years, and he erupted in 1921 with the British equivalent of "Nuts! All right, I'll show you!"

Candidates Make No Tax Cut Promises

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — There is something missing in the current state election campaign, but it is perhaps a good thing.

It is the promise of the politicians of other days that they propose to save public money when they are elected to the office of their choice, and that they intend that the taxpayer shall get a break on his tax bills.

Nobody in the present drive for votes has yet said, at least where he can be heard, that he intends to cut state taxes. It may be that there is a candidate for the legislature in some remote district who is peddling the favorite nostrum of other days, but he has not put out press releases about it so that the general public has been informed of his pledge. The men who will influence the direction of their party platforms after the September primary have quietly abandoned the old theme, however reluctantly they did so.

THE OUTLOOK

The fact is that the Wisconsin citizen is headed for another stiff round of tax increases.

In one way or another, the agents of the state treasury during the next two, four, and perhaps more years, are going to dig successively deeper into the pocket of virtually every economically productive resident of this state — and will probably borrow substantially increased sums simultaneously to make up the deficits that will pile up notwithstanding.

The attorney general, John Reynolds, was perfectly right, when in a public speech the other day he remarked that taxes are going up if he wins or loses the election for governor, and that the same consequences can be forecast regardless of the fortunes of the Republican state ticket.

There is a difference in the probable amount of spending under Democratic and Republican regimes. Democrats in general are committed to more public services and higher public spending. Even criticism that seems grossly unfair to everybody but the critic can have a better effect, by prodding us into renewed self-searching, rousing public interest in theatre, intensifying loyalties.

Now I'm just asking for trouble, I suppose. If Mr. Joslyn lays into us next season — but, fortunately for me, Don Jones also would like pretty frank criticism.

And, honestly now, Ken, didn't that controversial review spark extra interest in "Caroniel" and Riverside Players — and maybe help fill those four capacity houses?

Mrs. Ted Cloak
320 E. College Ave., Appleton

ing than are Republicans. The other day, for example, the chairman of the University of Wisconsin board of regents again expressed the theme of the liberal regents that university and college tuition payment should be abolished entirely, in spite of the huge new expenditure demands of those schools. There also is a clear difference in the methods of the two parties in taxation, although in the end the differences may not mean much to the average earner.

ECONOMY

All this does not mean that the old time favorite theme of "economy" in government is quite dead.

But the candidate no longer can make it believable when it is perfectly clear to anyone with the most rudimentary understanding that the total of public disbursements will rise hugely, and public taxation with it. It is hard to make any kind of an impression on details, on this small agency, and that, when the aggregate of public spending is rising before the taxpayers' eyes at a pace that makes the little economies appear trivial.

During his short-lived campaign for the governorship earlier in the year, Lt. Gov. Warren P. Knowles suggested a blue-ribbon commission of citizens and technicians to examine the total state budget of spending with the same skill and depth that was invested a couple of years ago in the taxation and revenue problem. That remains a good idea, not because there is any real chance of wholesale retrenchment, but because the competition for new tax dollars inevitably will become so severe that governors and legislatures will have to choose more carefully in the future on the basis of relative public benefits. They won't be able to satisfy all of the demands, and some guidelines on priorities will be imperative.

Catch All Bill Really Doesn't Catch So Much

From The Nashville Banner

In political parlance, the $373 million authorization measure sent Mr. Kennedy is called a "catch-all" appropriations bill. The description errs.

As the total of appropriations is more than 200 times that amount, it is at best a "catch-pail" bill; or catch-less-than-half of one per cent bill. Actually where the "all" is concerned, the tax payer does the catching.

Communities Look to Future of Downtowns

From The Asheville (N.C.) Citizen

The efforts to keep the downtown areas the drawing card they are now, is a knotty problem. Those far-seeing communities which are now launched on programs designed to rehabilitate their cores and to make them interesting and comfortable places to live appear to be on the right track.

And dangled if he didn't. He came up with — of all things — a melodrama, "The Green Goddess," which was a sensational hit not only in England, but in America, too, and was subsequently sold to the movies. Since it made oodles and oodles of money, it must have cut down considerably on the mail from Mr. Archer's detractors.

The Idea Is Born

I'm no Archer, but the precedent encourages me to take a stab at this business of constructive criticism. Let's start with the item you probably saw in the paper the other day: Mr. Edward A. Friskie, of Boswell, Pa., was honored by the President — and with just cause. Injured in an accident that left him unable to pursue his trade of mechanic, Mr. Friskie was retrained with government funds and is now a history teacher.

In all sincerity, my hat is off to Mr. Friskie and his inspiring refusal to be licked. And no one can deny that the scene makes, dramatically speaking, a good third-act curtain. Good, but not a smash.

What would I have done? It's really simple. Granted the same powers as Mr. Kennedy, I'd have taken Arthur Schlesinger, history teacher long since retrained unfit for his trade, and retrained him to be a mechanic. And, baby, would the welkin be ringing with cheers! The S.R.O. sign would be out, and you couldn't buy a seat for at least two years. We'd be sure of running until 1968, at the worst.

Racial Integration Fight Splits Unsuspecting City

BY SID MOODY
AP News Features Writer

MONTCLAIR, N. J., (AP) — Built on a hill, this blue-blooded suburb has an upper and lower end. It's having some trouble finding a middle.

An integration fight, which always seemed to be happening in Alabama or Georgia or some place like that, happened right here. Like an ax, it split the town. And it saddened it, too.

It's painful suddenly to learn that you can grow up with people, go to the same schools and colleges, usher at their weddings, play golf weekends or join the Junior League together and yet never really know them, never know that you would no longer be close because you favored letting Negroes into an all-white school and they didn't.

"We've been asked to a party tonight," said a woman who had favored integration. "I know there's going to be a friend of mine there who was against it. We'll just pretend nothing happened. But I wish I didn't have to go."

But she was going. Montclair doesn't throw dynamite or burn crosses. It has manners. That doesn't make the hurt any less, though.

Montclair is one of the fashionable "name" suburbs of the country. It's even had an automobile model named after it as a synonym for elegance. But there have been changes. Some townspeople were frankly taken aback to read the other day Montclair wasn't on the list of the 10 wealthiest towns in the nation. They thought it was a misprint when the local weekly wrote that adjacent Cedar Grove had a higher median income.

Change Comes

The changes are coming from the south end of town, where the Negroes live. The town itself runs like a rectangle along a ridge that looks through many shade trees for a majestic panorama of the Manhattan skyline. Homes that cost as much as $500,000 to build brood on the top of the ridge like Rhenish castles.

Of Montclair's 40,000-odd people, over 20 per cent are Negro. The Negroes in the lower part of town used to be the butlers, gardeners, maids and chauffeurs for the well-to-do. They came from the South and there are still Negroes who belong to "Virginia" and "North Carolina Clubs" even though they've lived most of their lives here.

Barely educated themselves, they saw to it their children got through high school. Now the third generation has come of age. It went to college. It does not want to live in the south end of town in crowded houses furnished with hand-me-downs donated by the "mamam" on the hill. It is moving upwards.

"Fifteen years ago this was a white neighborhood," said Alvin D. Moore Jr. seated on a wicker couch in his peaceful, shaded backyard midst the status symbols of suburbia — a station wagon in the driveway and a boxer dog stirring sleepily under a bush. It had the looks of a pleasant middle class neighborhood, some of it much like upper Montclair, an all-white section of town a few miles away.

But Moore and his neighbors are Negro.

They claim a Negro can't get a mortgage to buy a house in upper Montclair.

School Center

"I really don't know," said a white lawyer. "All I know is there are no Negroes in upper Montclair. You can draw your own inference."

But the fight didn't begin about housing, or even integration. It started with schools, something the town has long been proud of.

There are four junior high schools in Montclair. Glenfield is almost 90 per cent Negro. Hillside and George Inness are bi-racial and Mt. Hebron in upper Montclair is all white. For years the enrollment at Glenfield Jr. High has been declining. Negroes have moved out of the district.

A parochial school took other students.

As a result the Negro community felt the over-all quality of education at Glenfield was declining compared to the other junior highs. They went back over board of education records for figures they claimed showed Glenfield children did not have the same academic opportunities.

"The situation was allowed to exist because nobody cared, because the students at Glenfield were predominantly Negro," said Joseph Greene, head of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Charles Hemmingsley, attorney for the board of education, said the reason actually was the small enrollment meant classes couldn't be broken down into smart and slower sections and as a result the brighter children had always to wait for the others to catch up. The bright ones lost interest waiting.

After considerable homework on the matter, the NAACP asked the board to improve conditions. When they felt the board was dragging its feet, a group of mothers staged a 3-day picketing of Glenfield last fall.

"We felt a dramatization would, shall we say, encourage people to do something," said Greene. It did. The board promised to close Glenfield as a junior high.

Fight Began

A citizens' committee already had been formed under Philip B. Taylor, former assistant secretary of the air force under President Eisenhower, to study what to do with the dispossessed Glenfield students. That's when the fight began.

For what had started out as an educational problem with racial overtones became a racial problem with educational overtones.

When the Taylor Committee reported last spring it favored dividing the Glenfield students among the other three junior high schools, one grade at each, residents cried this was a violation of the neighborhood principle by which a child went to school where he lived. Others protested at the inconvenience of transfer of students to more distant schools, or the estimated $3 million cost of a single junior high the school board proposed to ultimately build. A seven-member minority of the 50-member committee thought there should be further study.

These were all valid objections sincerely held by many. But by all?

A man knocked at a woman's home in upper Montclair and stuck out a petition. "Sign this. This is how we'll keep the Niggers out of here."

She hadn't warmed to the idea of integrating all white Mt. Hebron. But here was segregation standing in a business suit on her doorstep in Montclair, New Jersey.

Divided Family

A sister and a brother found themselves so violently divided over the issue they agreed not to see each other at all until the issue calmed down. People at cocktail parties quietly got up, got their coats and left when conversation turned to the schools. And sometimes they didn't come back for the next party.

"I've lived all my life with these people," said one housewife, distressed when a friend called her, not entirely in jest, "nigger lover."

The oft-repeated joke "some of my best friends live in upper Montclair but I wouldn't want my daughter married to one" drew sharp glances as well as grins.

"At one of the meetings there was almost a lynch atmosphere in the air," said Mrs. Ruth Knowles, a member of the Taylor Committee and a supporter of revamping the school system.

One evening her phone rang. "You do gooder," said an anonymous voice. "Why don't you shut up or get out?"

One resident thought some of the opposition was due "just to their shock at the idea of seeing Negroes walking in upper Montclair."

An upper Montclair housewife agreed, confiding to a friend, "It makes me nervous. I know it shouldn't, I end up fighting myself."

Other upper Montclair residents charge the white residents in the southwestern part of town — where the very biggest homes are and where the Negro cult leader Sweet Daddy Grace once managed to buy a mansion — are for mixing the schools because it will ease the pressure of Negro home buyers to make further inroads there.

Negro Spectators

The spoken fight has concerned the neighborhood school policy, the cost and upheaval of student transfer. The unspoken struggle has been of race, as bitter as it has been silent. But it's been a struggle pitting white against white. The Negroes have watched and waited.

"If we talk too much and get emotional, we're lost," said one. "Let the whites get emotional."

"It's lucky this town has so many educated, level-headed Negroes," said one Montclair white. "If it didn't, Montclair would be torn apart."

To some whites, the whole affair is the result of NAACP "rabble rousing."

Actually, under Greene's leadership the Negroes have followed a gradual course. It has been made clear to agitators who have started heated integration battles elsewhere in the New York metropolitan area they were not welcome in Montclair. By being cool yet determined, the NAACP has perhaps achieved more than if it had been militant.

The board of education finally has decided to divide the 183 pupils at Glenfield starting this week among the other three high schools until a single junior high,

In the midst of the bitter integration fight in Montclair, N. J., Negro boys play with the only two white children left in the neighborhood. The grandparents, or sometimes great-grandparents, of the town's Negro children were servants of the well-to-do families. Their parents, increasingly college educated and middle class want better schooling for their youngsters. (AP Newsfeatures Photo) centrally located, can be built, hopefully by 1965.

A suit by white parents to forestall the plan has been thrown out of federal court and the matter left for the state commissioner of education. Opponents of the plan are talking of a petition calling for a referendum. Proponents think, without too much certainty, the referendum would not get enough "no" votes.

Meanwhile, what of Montclair, a nice town with nice people and an ugly battle?

The NAACP, which states its sole objective was to get a better education for Negro students, claims it has received "acceptable commitments" towards that goal. It thinks the fight has put racial relations on a sounder footing.

But the cheers at the Fourth of July parade hushed to silence when the NAACP delegation drove by in its black Cadillac past a group of white spectators.

And the scars amongst the whites have not healed under the pleasant sun of the dry suburban summer.

"Frankly," said one shaken resident who has known no other home but Montclair, "we have considered moving. It's been too much. Our friends or people we thought were our friends..."

It has left Paul Miller, a young editor, disappointed and troubled.

"I was counting on, or did count on, the good sense of a town like this with its intelligence, its professional people, its young people to solve its racial problems."

"If you can't do it here, where can you do it?"

Adenauer, DeGaulle Meet Sept. 4

BY WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP News Analyst

Two indestructible old political warriors have thrown away the politicians' rule book in an attempt to produce one of the most significant developments of the century in western Europe.

Their handshake Sept. 4 will represent a long step in the reconciliation of two traditional enemies who have been at each other's throats three in less than 100 years.

Back in 1870, in the Franco-Prussian War, one of the first of the modern people-against-people conflicts, the Germans under the Iron Chancellor Otto von Bismarck utterly defeated the French Emperor Napoleon III.

The war actually gave birth to modern Germany by uniting the loose federation of German states under the banner of King Wilhelm of Prussia, who became Emperor Wilhelm I of Germany.

Then World War I

Again, in 1914, the Germans invaded French soil only to be defeated by an alliance including French, English and American armies in World War I. That war ended the German Empire of the Emperor Wilhelm II.

For the third time in 70 years, in 1940, the Germans under Dictator Adolf Hitler overwhelmed the French in World War II and were in turn crushed by the French allies, the English, Americans and Russians.

It's hardly the background for a friendly handshake. Yet today, the leaders of West Germany and France, the towering figures of Western Europe, are saying things about one another's nation which would have meant political suicide for a French or German politician not too long ago.

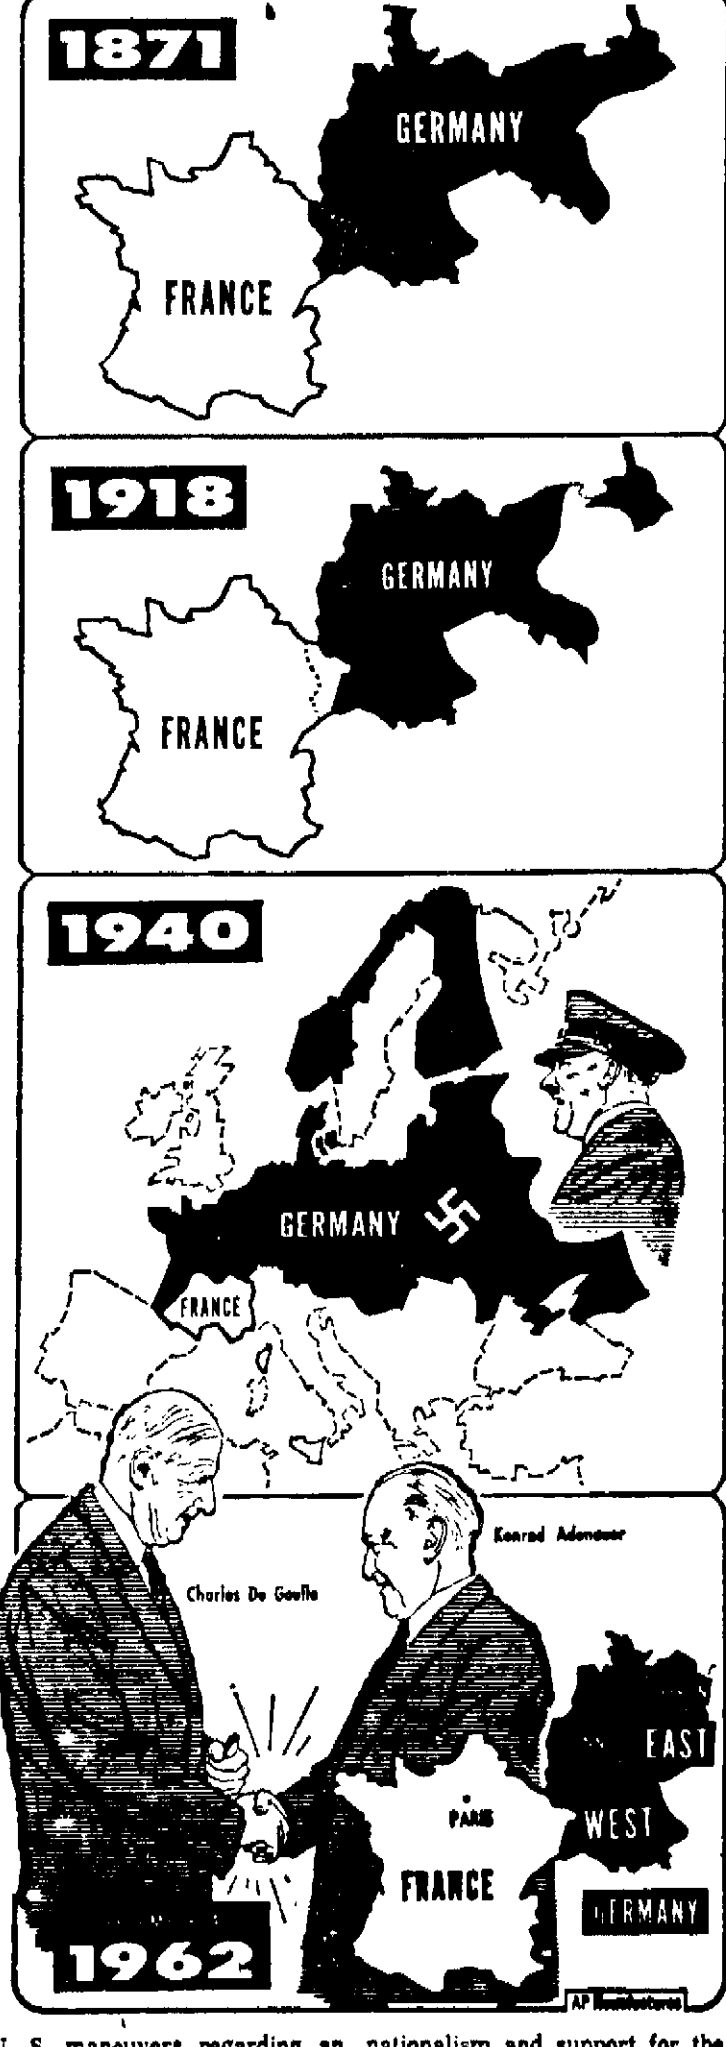

The Sept. 4 state visit of austere, 71-year-old President Charles De Gaulle to patriarchal, 66-year-old Chancellor Konrad Adenauer drives another rivet into a growing, sturdy structure. And for a variety of reasons, many is the West view the al-

Problems With Both

The United States welcomes any harbinger of a future European political integration. But U. S. policy makers have had their problems with President De Gaulle, and have had them, to a somewhat lesser degree, with the crusty West German chancellor.

De Gaulle apparently still believes in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. But he also believes in France's individual glory and in the idea that it should have its own national nuclear force. The United States does not welcome the idea of one more finger on the nuclear trigger.

Not long ago West Germans had been reported hostile to U. S. maneuvers regarding an approach to the Russians on the Berlin question. There had been other friction over what some Bonn officials regarded as hints that West Germany should beef up her contribution to NATO, conventional forces. These difficulties appear since to have been smoothed over.

There are other important aspects in the French-German courtship. One of the most significant is the indication of a burgeoning feeling of European nationalism and support for the idea of a large degree of independence in shaping European policy. This bespeaks an urge in Europe — as Europe — to be regarded as the equal partner of the United States in NATO.

Some Opposition

Against this is posed the apprehension of the smaller Benelux — Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — nations that the French-German combine can dominate the European Common Market and an integrated Europe. The Benelux nations have been hoping British membership in the Common Market might fend off such a development. But Britain herself is divided on when, how or whether to join the Common Market and participate in the political unity which is supposed to grow out of close economic cooperation.

The possibility of the Bonn-Paris understanding creating friction elsewhere in the NATO camp does not make it any more attractive to the Russians. They view it with deep suspicion, call it a "notorious axis" aimed at preventing settlement of the Berlin and German problems. They accuse De Gaulle of wanting to recruit West German know-how to produce French nuclear weapons.

French on Guard

De Gaulle and Adenauer do not seem impressed by the sensation they have produced on both sides of the Iron Curtain. They are one in the conviction that there is nothing in Berlin to negotiate with the Russians. De Gaulle has told Adenauer the Paris government stands firmly for German reunification on the principle of self-determination. French governments which preceded De Gaulle would have been horrified at the thought of such a policy statement.

Adenauer has been more enthusiastic for actual political unity than De Gaulle, who has no intention of agreeing to any supra-national structure which would entail surrender of French sovereignty. De Gaulle's idea of unity is a "Europe of the Fatherlands," undominated by any one nation or group, but cooperating closely while retaining national individuality.

The German leader has been pictured as preferring a system of periodic meetings of heads of the European Common Market governments to make decisions on the basis of majority vote.

Apparently, however, what differences of views remain between them have not dampened their ardor for their alliance. Adenauer has told De Gaulle he sees it as a firm political dam against Communism. He has credited De Gaulle with the wisdom and energy to make possible a reconciliation which can permit 103 million French and Germans to live in harmony and become a great political and economic force.

That Is the Question

Speaking of science outpacing our human institutions, let's see now how many orbits could Telstar have made around the earth during the many hours that Senator Morse and Neuberger (D., Ore.) were filibustering against the communications satellite bill — and, incidentally, holding up other legislation?

Need for A Public Spokesman

The public has become well aware that, even though it foots the bill in almost every instance, it must play an ineffective spectator role in wage and price decisions. This role, however frustrating, is not wholly deplorable. It jibes with the principles of a free society. There has been a growing conviction, however, that the public interest ought to be given more weight in labor-management negotiations if this could be done without excessive government interference.

One idea often advanced, and again advanced recently by Solicitor General Archibald Cox, is that the public should be effectively present at negotiations. Cox raised the question whether public representatives could not act as a sort of "third force" to counterbalance the labor and management giants.

The government already provides a mediation service which is intended to insure that disputants shall have face to face contact in the bargaining tradition. Something more than that is needed. The public needs a pleader to make certain that all the possible consequences of this or that settlement are made known to those who are engaged in a bargaining session.

There should be no threat of government coercion in any such participation. Public involvement would be predicated on the belief that if both management and labor were cognizant of the people's interest, wiser and fairer economic decisions would ensue. This would not always follow, but the chances would be better than they now are. A public spokesman at labor-management negotiations might do much to reduce the constant pressure on wages and prices.

The End of the Line?

Age of Science Takes Over and Man No Longer Controls Destiny

BY ERIC SEVAREID

ASPEN, Colo. — In this serene valley it's still summertime, fish are jumpin' and the thinkin' is easy.

New buildings of harsh cinder block exterior and subdued, academic interior rise from the sagebrush to expand the capacity of this hidden Shangri La to accommodate even more seminars and conferences of general and specific ponderers. If the expense account society has produced more Nevada gambling dens and Florida hotels of Wall Street Renaissance design, it has also produced more deductible opportunities for serious group thought.

Plato must have had something like the Aspen existence in mind when he talked about the good life. One leaves here with a slimmer waistline, browner skin, better appetite and the visceral conviction that he is a little wiser even if he can't demonstrate the fact by word or deed. Anyone who can't learn something from exposure to such men as Walt Rostow, Crane Brinton of Harvard, John Blum of Yale, Charles Bohlen, Jan de Hartog, the poet Jonathan Williams and assorted scientists is a dull dog indeed, and I'm in their debt even if I can't calculate the figure on that side of the ledger.

Rebuttal From Jet

The only rebuttal is the occasional sound of a military jet from the Air Academy, so high above even this altitude that Shangri La must look, to the pilot, quite fat and unexceptional. When you think about the jet, its sound is a waspish Bronx cheer, and moral concepts seem embarrassingly pointless.

The group thinking here has been wide and top lofty. We have gossiped about the nature of man, juggled philosophies, empires and eras. All of us exhibited 20-20 hindsight and made it perfectly clear what the age of embattled religion, the age of exploration, the age of the industrial revolution had done to and for the human race. We plucked but feebly at the age of science, the present age. While the military jet with its hypothetical load of impatient atoms uttered its little jeer overhead.

Even to a jump-seat philosopher it seems clear that this age of science has to be, in the history writing sense, man's final epoch or era. We are now taking apart and putting to use the basic stuff of nature, and that's the end of the line. The embattled religions were controlled by one force or another, political or geographical. There were natural limits to surface exploration or invasion. In these cases a limited portion of the human race was involved; the effects were partial.

No Limits Now

This age of science has no natural limits we know of, and words about the properties of a new type of helium; words both ambitious and skeptical about the role of Americans as world redeemers; trim and elegant words, edged with acid, about the uglification of our physical environment; stodgy words about big government and big business, the evils and virtues thereof.

Man is a thinking breed, descendant though he be of a risen ape and not a fallen angel, "nature's first brief experiment in self-awareness, trapped between earth and a glimpse of heaven." He tried. So the premise of this place and this process must be that nature is going to give homo sapiens another chance, whether he deserves it or not. Man seems unshakably convinced that his soul is unique and Americans remain at least half persuaded that nature has some special interest in their own survival. So these discussions have been essentially exercises in morality — the luxury always enjoyable when survival is assumed. We have been living on intellectual dessert all month.

Man Not in Control

Anybody still sure that man is in control of his fate on this earth has only to look at the new facts and figures on the massive use of pure poison on our fruits and vegetables, on the increasing pollution of our air, soil and waters. He has only to consider that doctors have but the haziest notions as to the ultimate effect of the indiscriminate use of antibiotics in altering body chemistry, in creating new diseases still unimagined. We aren't fruit flies; a generation require 33 years.

Pandora's box has just been opened; the fun has just begun. It is an ingrained human and particularly American illusion that we will always win in the ninth inning because we always have — we're still here, aren't we, after a couple of million years of catastrophes? What is so hard to grasp is that we aren't playing baseball anymore. Up to now everything, including wars, plagues and tidal waves, was a game compared to the business now at hand.

Well, maybe it's the Aspen altitude, physical and intellectual. Gravity is weaker up here and thoughts have a way of floating out of reach. At sea level, the Birch society, desegregation, Jackie and the doublet controversy will no doubt assume form and substance again, but from here you couldn't make them out with a telescope. # Milk Price Map Puts Midwest At Lowest Level

Wisconsin-Minnesota
Dairy Farmers Get Least for Products

BY OVID A. MARTIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — A map showing the price structure of milk in the United States has been prepared by the Agriculture Department. It has the appearance of a weather map on a day of weather extremes.

Lines are drawn on the map to outline areas which had during a survey period the same or nearly the same prices, much as weather maps use isobar lines to connect areas of equal barometric pressure.

During the survey period—July, 1960, through June, 1961—prices paid dairymen ranged from a low of $4 or less for 100 pounds of 3.5 per cent butterfat milk to a high of $6.76. This showed a spread of at least 64 per cent in producer prices. No other farm commodity shows such a price spread.

Lowest Prices
The lowest prices prevailed in much of Minnesota and Wisconsin, major dairy states, and a northern part of Iowa.

The highest price—$6.76—prevailed in Savannah, Ga. The map and an accompanying report show that fluid milk is subject to perhaps more price-influencing factors than other farm products. These factors include:

actions of state and federal agencies establishing minimum producer prices in specified regulated areas; the cost of transporting milk to shortage areas; the local demand for milk and the bargaining positions of dairymen and milk distributors.

For the country as a whole, supply and demand factors exert relatively small influence.

Regulation Factor
Perhaps the major factor causing sharp difference in prices is government regulation and cost of shipping it from a surplus area to a short supply area.

Government regulation, usually confined to individual urban marketing areas, sets minimum prices which handlers must pay dairymen operating in the regulated marketing area. Such regulation is designed to assure local dairy products to compete with non-fluctuating supply of milk.

Many of these regulated markets have the benefit of regulations which tend to discourage inflow of lower price milk from more distant surplus producing areas.

High in East
The milk price map identified the eastern and southeastern parts of the country as relatively high-priced milk. East of the Appalachians, prices averaged $5.64 or more a hundred pounds. It was $6.30 in much of southern New England and New York and New Jersey as well as in a Washington and Baltimore marketing region. It also was $6.30 in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and part of Alabama.

The low point in the east was Vermont with a $4.92 average. The Midwest, outside of Minnesota, Wisconsin and parts of Iowa, prices ranged from $4.46 to $4.92. In the western third of the country, prices ranged from $5.38 to $5.84.

Prices paid dairymen in most eastern and southeastern markets were above the price at which surplus milk in other areas could have been purchased and transported to these markets.

Most of these markets employed a commodity payment program of $4 or less for 100 pounds of 3.5 per cent butterfat milk. Payments were levied on the imported milk to take away any price advantage it might otherwise have. However, the Supreme Court ruled recently that it was unlawful to impose a payment sufficiently high to create an import barrier.

Slow Movement
The study showed that the volume of milk moved from surplus areas of the Midwest to other markets declined between 1957-58 and 1960 despite increased efficiencies in transporting milk long distances.

What happened between these two periods were increases in the production capacity of dairymen in the normally tight-supply areas around urban areas.

Some dairy industry leaders—particularly in the big midwestern dairy states—contend the regulated prices in the controlled urban markets have been too high and that barriers against shipments have been too rigid.

These critics contend that production of milk in the urban areas of the East as well as in the Southeast is much too costly, considering that dairymen in these areas must depend to a large extent on feed shipped in from the midwestern grain areas.

Production in many of the regulated markets, particularly in the spring and summer season, exceeds consumer demands for fluid milk. As a consequence, these areas divert considerable quantities of milk into lower-priced products to compete with the products on which much of the Midwest must depend for an outlet for milk.

Test of Strength

Reds Back Catholic for Chile Congress Seat

BY JOSE M. ORLANDO

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Two years ago the Communists almost won the presidency of Chile. Two years from now they will try again. An interim test of their strength comes Monday when they back a Roman Catholic candidate in a special congressional election.

Seemingly full of confidence, the Reds are making their bid in a traditionally Conservative district.

The candidate they are backing is Sergio Recabarren, 43, a lawyer running in a three-way contest to fill a House seat vacated by the death of a Conservative deputy.

President Jorge Alessandri's right-of-center coalition government is supporting Gustavo Monckeberg, 49, a doctor and conservative who is a political newcomer. The third candidate is Bernardo Leighton, 53, a moderately leftist Christian Democrat and minister of labor and education in previous governments.

Red Boost
The Alessandri government, with a clear working majority in the House of Deputies, is not threatened. But a Communist victory—or even good showing—could give the Reds a propaganda boost for 1964 elections.

Recabarren himself is a member of the National Democratic Alliance, was beaten by only 34,000 votes by Alessandri in 1958 which joined the leftist Popular Action Front set up after a Communist-Socialist coalition barely missed winning the 1958 elections.

There are only 14 Red deputies in the 147-seat House. However, the Communist-backed presidential candidate, Senator Salvador Allende, is expected to make an attempt to win the 1964 elections. Predicting a pro-Communist from the popular action front.

government will take over the government in 1964. Recabarren says: "Marxist and non-Marxist parties are joined in the common goal of dislodging, by democratic means, the present minority government and satisfying the anguish and needs of the Chilean people."

"Everybody has the duty to participate in this urgent task—the Freemason, the atheist Marxist and the practicing Roman Catholic as well."

Follow Fidel
The Communist leadership, in supporting Recabarren, has openly declared it aims to establish a regime in Chile patterned after Fidel Castro's Cuba.

Like Castro at the beginning, the Reds in this predominantly Roman Catholic republic claim there is no incompatibility between communism and the Catholic Church.

Recabarren has taken a slightly softer line than the Red hierarchy in an attempt to attract votes of independents but his basic platform follows the Communist line. He wants nationalization of industries, the biggest being the American-owned copper and nitrate industries. He also urges redistribution of wealth among the poor.

Raps JFK
Recabarren denounces President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress program as "just a good wish" and declares: "As St. Paul said, hell is full of good wishes."

The contested congressional district covers Santiago City, and is thus a stiff challenge for the Communists. They have shown most strength in the country where poverty has made the people receptive to propaganda.

The Communist party was outlawed 12 years but became legal in 1952. It is a small but well-oiled political machine. The Communists have a majority—but not absolute control—in the leadership of the labor union movement. They get support among university students, young intellectuals and peasants.

Labor Day Recalls Heydays of Granite Industry in Waushara County Villages

BY STERLING SORESEN

RED GRANITE—Nick Leone of Lohrville carries forward, in limited stonecutting and quarrying operations, the skills and crafts once keynoting the entire life of Red Granite, Lohrville and West Point, in Waushara County. Montello, county seat of Marquette, and in a lesser degree the economy of Berlin.

The outcroppings of native granite and the quarrying and cutting of the stone gave a particular robustness to the flavor of the quarry towns, setting them apart from the other rural communities of central Wisconsin. These quarry towns were, in the heyday of granite "mining," wide-open communities, where gambling was not unknown and prohibition laws widely flouted.

The skilled stonecutters and other quarrymen came from Scotland, Italy, Cornwall, Finland, Poland and Wales and this international flavor still tinctures Red Granite, Lohrville, Berlin and Montello of today. Second and third generation descendants of these paying block and monument cutters still people the quarry communities.

Organized Labor

And it was in these communities, too, that organized labor first got a solid footing in this section of the Badger state, and for many a year, Labor Day was the red letter day of Red Granite-Lohrville, as well as of Montello. Those were the days when a card-carrying unionist was more or less equated with radicalism.

Today, however, gaping, water-filled quarry pits, some fathomed at 120 feet, stand as somber, desolate and abandoned sentinels of the yesteryears when Red Granite was Waushara County's largest community, at 1,350, and Montello artisans cut the granite for Gen. U.S. Grant's tomb in New York.

Seek to Oust Red Agencies in West Berlin

BY DAVID M. NICHOL

Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

BONN — West Berlin authorities are hoping soon to have Allied permission to oust Soviet business agencies that are infiltrating the western sectors of the city.

On the list for expulsion as undesirable are a branch office of the Soviet travel bureau "Intourist" and an office of "Sovexport," which distributes Soviet films. Berliners fear the Soviets are trying to reestablish a four-power situation in West Berlin while excluding East Berlin altogether. The Soviets have not exercised any control in the western sectors of the city since they walked out of the four-power Kommandatura in 1948. The Soviets contend the Kommandatura is dead.

In addition to opening business offices in West Berlin, the Soviets have tried in other ways recently to get a foot in West Berlin. A Soviet representative showed up recently at a meeting of the West Berlin City Assembly and took a seat with the allied liaison officers. The Allies protested to the assembly's president who ruled that the Soviet representative must take a place with the general public.

tomb. In the Waushara, Green Lake, Marquette county area, unionism made its first foothold in the state and Labor Day was the big celebration in the "wide-open" mining towns. (Photo Courtesy of Jake Malson)

State Capitol

Additionally, colorful samples and materials of the pits of Red Granite, Lohrville, Berlin and Montello are to be found in the rotunda and in the galleries and niches of the state capitol building at Madison. They came in hues, tints and shades of red and blue-grey, with Montello stone preferred for monumental purposes.

As a fledgling at the bar, Atty. Darrow successfully defended a quartet of stonecutters charged with dynamiting the derricks at Red Granite during a labor-management dispute. He won during a trial in Watouma in circuit court which is yet remembered for its oratorical flourishes by the oldsters of Red Granite-Lohrville.

Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson's association with Mid-Wisconsin quarrying came through his ruling that the Wundy City's waterfront breakwaters came from the Flynn quarries at Lohrville. This was particularly advantageous to the pitmen, and continued for many a year during the operations of the Flynn quarry in the Lohrville-West Point complex.

The old bank vault and the financial house's lobby long abandoned and starkly desolate, stand off the Lohrville main sector as a grim and ghostly reminder of a promising future foreseen in the community's yesteryears. The banking fixtures, and the vault, cob-web covered and dusty, crumpled and grimed by the years, are added testimonials to the era when quarrying was the industry of Lohrville.

The banking building, now used to warehouse carnival wheels and fixtures, is in all essence, the replica of a setting for a movie-TV Ghost Town. Orville "Pops" Newell, a carnival worker, lives in the old bank during the winter months, and can tell of the days when it was the principal counting house of Waushara county.

Cutter's Memory

Another who remembers Red Granite-Lohrville in their heyday is Jacob "Jake" Malson, a 74-year-old stonecutter, who has worked in most of the pits of the area. He goes back to the days of quarrying when the derricks to bring the dynamited blocks out of the pits were horse-operated, and no machines were on tap to do the drilling, necessary to prepare the blocks of granite for the black cutters.

"Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis were cities where the paving blocks were sold in an earlier day," he recalls. "Too, much of the larger material went into the Chicago breakwaters, and the better pieces were set aside for use for tombstones."

As many as 500 stonecutters were employed in the Red Granite-Lohrville pits during the peak of operations, and they were recruited largely from among immigrant Italians, Cornishmen, Finns, Polish and Scottish artisans, he says.

Name Personalities

"Some of the pits went down from 80 to 120 feet, and these are today water-filled and abandoned, with few exceptions. I worked in the quarries of Berlin, Montello and in those of Lannon, and can tell you about the days with parades, floats, street dancing, high-jinks, and 'wide-open' operations along Main street."

While they won't go so far as to compare Red Granite with Wisconsin's Hurley, they intimate it was a "free-and-easy" community, which today is a model of propriety, and of farming industry.

Malson hand-fashioned the granite blocks for his home on Red Granite's Waushara Street, and can tell where much of the other granite went in an earlier day. From its peak population quarries, look back nostalgically to the time when Red Granite's Labor Day celebrations were the mains the flavor of the heyday "mostest" in central Wisconsin, of quarrying.

European Influence

He, as well as William Williams, another old-timer of the day, from its peak population quarries, look back nostalgically to the time when Red Granite's Labor Day celebrations were the mains the flavor of the heyday "mostest" in central Wisconsin, of quarrying.

Union Miniere Forms Backbone of Katanga

BY PETER GROSE

KOLWEZI, Katanga (AP)—After two rounds of Katanga-U.N. warfare, the Union Miniere du Haut Katanga offered to release any of its mining engineers who wanted to return to the safety of their homes in Europe.

It has 700 European employees in this placid European town. Exactly two chose to leave. This is a place where Union Miniere really counts, at the copper and cobalt mines of President Moinse Tshombe's province.

Warnings have been sounded at U.N. headquarters that the world's third largest copper producer will have to cooperate before peace can settle over the Congo. Such storm-cloud declarations seem a long way off as little trains chug out of the open-face mines loaded to the brim with treasures of pale green mud.

Copper Mines

Kolwezi is the site of the Union Miniere's three most important copper mines. From here the raw ore is taken by rail to the electrolysis plant and smelter of Jadotville, 75 miles away.

—like Kolwezi—are built by a Union Miniere construction subsidiary.

Single Man

Each important production center is managed by a single man, representing the board of governors. In Kolwezi he is a metallurgical engineer named Jean-Jacques Saquet. He arrived from Belgium in 1948, and moved to Kolwezi in 1961 to preside over the opening of the Lulu electrolysis plant.

There copper ore is taken automatically through the stages of purification. The whole plant is managed by a few technicians in a control room.

"It would be foolish not to concede that our future is somewhat in doubt," Saquet, 39, says. "We had to decide whether to keep advancing and expanding in confidence or gradually retrench in expectation of bad days ahead."

"All along the line we chose the former. We're going ahead with new works and projects and every week two or three new technicians arrive to keep up with the added demands in specialized manpower."

Katanga Revenue

Seventy per cent of Union Miniere's production income last year went to Katanga public authorities. But production and revenues continue at their pre-emergency highs. Officials say Union Miniere this year should produce at least last year's 293,509 tons of copper and perhaps top last year's 8,326 tons of cobalt.

This resilient success is partly due to the devotion of the company's staff, which knows that Union Miniere will take care of its own.

Another reason is the extraordinary benevolence of nature. Only recently did Union Miniere have to dig underground for profitable copper. Even now the most productive veins are close to the surface. Easy open-face methods of extraction account for the bulk of Union Miniere's production.

Rivers nearby enabled Union Miniere to build its own system of dams and harness hydroelectric power, enough for its own vast operation and the adjoining copper belt of Northern Rhodesia.

'Great River Road' Calls Attention To Mississippi History, Scenery

BY CHARLES HOUSE

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Shantyboat folks and deep-south Negroes know full well that Old Al, the River King, still lies somnolently in the ooze on the Mississippi River bottom, but the monstrous alligator has not risen from the depths in recent years. Time was when he rose, huge and glistening, to survey his domain and to smoke his kingly pipe on frequent fog-shrouded days.

House

It would be well if he were to arise once more to see what man has wrought along the borders of his kingdom. For — where there was once an unrelated series of minor roads skirting the river — there is now the Great River Road. It skirts both shores of the Mississippi from its headwaters at Lake Itasca to the Gulf of Mexico 2,546 miles away, and it's just a beginning.

Ultimately, through connecting links, it will flow down from Alaska over the Alaska Highway and it will tie in with the Trans-Canada Highway (scheduled to be opened Monday). The link-up may be made at Calgary, Alberta and the route will swing through Saskatchewan, Ontario and Manitoba before it joins the present roads which ramble through the 10 River states.

Impressive Trip

At the Gulf of Mexico where the Mississippi River ends its long, impressive journey, the proposed additions to the Great River Road will extend it further.

At that distant terminus, the road will again be picked up and routed around the Gulf in Texas into the Pan American countries to the Canal and South America.

The slogan of the Great River Road — "From Pines to Palms" — is accurate indeed.

At present, the Great River Road is generally labeled with its official highway marker, a 12-spoked wheel of a river boat. The spokes signify the river states and the two Canadian provinces through which the present road runs. Within the wheel is a sketch of a river steamer, a suitable symbol of the Mississippi River.

The road, presently made up of existing highways, a combination of federal, state and local roads linked into one, ranges through Manitoba and Ontario, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The long road, supported by provincial and state agencies, has drawn funds from chambers of commerce, from state highway departments and service clubs and business firms and has also had support from the federal government. At present, a bill in Senate committee, which seeks to authorize $2 million in federal funds a year for two years for construction, land purchases and development of recreational sites.

Federal reports cited 3,287 miles of the Great River Road in the U.S. Some 735 miles of this will be new roads, 401 of them are local, 1,713 miles are trunk roads, 338 are interstate and 4 miles of it is along the already established Natchez Trace Highway.

National Group

There exists a national organization, The Mississippi Parkway Commission headed by J. Lester White of Baton Rouge, La., which is supported by annual subscriptions of $1,000 from each of the 10 river states and the two Canadian provinces. Each state or province assembles these funds by whatever means seems available to them — by subscriptions and donations or state funds.

One town — Baudette, Minn. — with a population of about 2,000 persons, has presented the commission with $1,350, an amount left over from a bridge dedication ceremony. Baudette, located in the Lake of the Woods country, stands to profit from tourism on the Great River Road.

It has been estimated that if the Great River Road will attract as few as one per cent of North America's recreation travelers, it will bring $125 million to the river states. There seems little doubt that the one per cent is a minimal estimate. In Wisconsin alone, predictions are for a fantastic growth in the transportation industry. The State Department of Resource Development estimated that Wisconsin's present 1,300,000 passenger cars will double in the next 40 years.

The same department announced that much of the road building of the future in Wisconsin must be keyed to the growth of vacation driving.

Wisconsin's part in the Great River Road covers a distance of almost 250 miles, from Prescott in Pierre County where the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers meet, to the Illinois border.

Perhaps nowhere in the world is there a more attractive route than that of the Great River Road, from Canada to the Gulf.

The great Mississippi River which drains almost half of the land in the United States is as attractive to the amateur historian as it is to the avid boatman. Every Mississippi River village and city is steeped in its yesterday's, for the big river dominated the frontier activity of birds aplenty. And here is the great Mississippi flyway for the ducks.

Rockhounds can find delight in the geological formations and stones not known in this section of Wisconsin. For here, along the Mississippi, from about Redwing, Minn. to the northern reaches of Illinois is the strange land known as the driftless area. The great glaciers of prehistoric times, which smothered and profoundly effected the land of most of Wisconsin, never reached here. Geologists point out that the glaciers thrust southward, divided on the Superior headlands and passing to the east and west before rejoining. The result is some 10,000 square miles of unglaciated land in Wisconsin (and parts of Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois).

Burial Grounds

All along the Great River Road are superb examples of Indian burial grounds. Art seekers are almost sure to be rewarded. For example, in Cassville, Wis., I strolled through an alleyway and found evidences of a burial site — human teeth, human ribs, metal-arsenal bones and countless arrowhead chips.

In the five hills around Galena, Ill., there are more than 500 known Indian mounds, some of them unusual. One, a serpent effigy mound, is more than 500 feet high. Another is a horse mound in the form of a horse.

The greatest Indian mounds in all of the United States are located on route, at Cahokia near East St. Louis, Ill. Many of the tall bluffs are covered with mounds. One set at Wyau-lusing State Park stretches out for nearly a mile. I discovered an excellent series of Indian mounds just off the highway at De Soto, Wis.

Not much of United States history is missed on this route, for along the road there are old homes spectacular in their charm. Villa Louis, the fantastic home of Hercules Dousman has excited attention in many places of the world. Some of the splendid homes of history-conscious Galena, Ill., attract visitors from afar; and the lovely old antebellum homes of the deep South man and John Decatur of Ware-ham were well worth the inspection journey. Too, at Cassville, is the refurbished home of Wisconsin's first governor, Nelson Dewey. At Hannibal, Missouri is Mark Twain's old home. (One of the streets in Winona, Minn., is named in Twain's honor, "Mark II St.")

Historic Forts

Historic forts and their sites are carefully marked along the Great River Road, and the passerby has his attention called frequently to notable Indian battle-grounds, such as the one near Victory, Wis., where Chief Black Hawk's people were virtually wiped out.

Down the long road, there is something for everyone, for it has been the path of history, the route of Pere Marquette and Joliet and of hundreds of the great fur traders, pioneers, explorers, frontiersmen and statesmen who formulated the country through which they passed.

The Great River Road, now ready for the modern traveler, and soon (perhaps by 1965) to be a lovely dual parkway ranging up and down both sides of Old Man River, recreation and history into focus.

If Old Al, the River King who is now half-forgotten, could rise up out of the mud on the river bottom and look again at his domain, he'd be surprised.

WISCONSIN RAPIDS (AP)—A special cranberry marketing committee has agreed on the setting aside of 18 per cent of the nation's 1962 cranberry crop, it was reported today.

The action was taken at a committee meeting Thursday and Friday at Wareham, Mass. It is designed to implement the cranberry industry's marketing agreement designed to reduce surpluses.

George Olsson of Plymouth, Mass., was elected chairman of the committee, named by market-organization earlier this year. Ben Tannuk of Wisconsin was elected vice chairman and John Decatur of Wareham was chosen secretary-treasurer. Too, at Cassville, is the your help we could not have brought our project to a successful conclusion."

"It may seem strange," said Dr. DeNoSiquin, "that so little money can mean so much, but it's the timing rather than the amount that is so often appreciated by the researchers."

Literary Tape

The AMA foundation grants, which have a ceiling of $1,000, are available with a minimum of paper work and delay. Because of this they have saved off many a financial emergency in the laboratory.

Medical professor of one large university college: "While not a vestigial grant, your award never-theless was highly useful because it gave me the immediate availability and minimum of red tape, reports, portance of their work, we may etc." A professor at another medical center wrote: "I believe for there is a real need in the future of research which can help us to better understand the human mind."

Basic requirements for the grants are minimal. The only major stipulations are that the medical research have merit and that a peanut might be pretty nourishing funds be used in actual re-

Varied Uses The uses to which the grants have been put since the program was initiated 10 years ago varied, ranging from the purchase of radio isotopes, which one investigator found hadn't been budgeted in his federal grant, to a scientist who can out of money know he could let the paper work and delay. Because of this they have saved off many a financial emergency in the laboratory.

Another group of recipients have been young graduates without established reputations as investigators. "This has provided large grant, your award never-theless was highly useful because it gave me the immediate availability and minimum of red tape, reports, portance of their work, we may etc." A professor at another medical center wrote: "I believe for there is a real need in the future of research which can help us to better understand the human mind."

The young researcher faces another dilemma. His line of investigation may offer every possibility of success, but without a reputation he may find it difficult to obtain supporting grants. To fill these monetary vacuums, the American Medical Association Education and Research Foundation makes available supplementary funds which will tide over the work until the researcher gets his regular grants straightened out.

"It's amazing," said Dr. Norman DeNoSiquin, secretary of the Grant-in-Aid for Research project, "what a few dollars delivered at a critical time can mean to medical research."

Heart Research

As one specialist, involved in developing heart surgery techniques, explained: "The funds were indeed invaluable. At the time we were developing methods of intracardiac surgery, which have at present yielded very known clinical success." The grant, he said, was used to purchase anticoagulant drugs, which were essential to the work but which were not provided by other grants.

An eminent microbiologist said that the $500 he received from the AMA "enabled me to bridge the gap between the expiration of one grant and the beginning of another," and a university researcher added: "Our major grant had expired, and without

Mechanized Improvements Help Plant Increase Its Industrial Position and Boosts Community as Well

Foundry Automation Results in Bigger Payroll, More Prestige

BY JAN ALBERT

BRILLION — During the last four years automation has become one of four standard molding processes used by the Brillion Iron Works, Inc. The introduction and development of automated equipment for this independent gray iron foundry actually began before 1957, but did not reach its peak until the summer of 1958 when an automated mold blowing system was completed.

The new unit has resulted in higher production, reduced costs and higher employment. In the field for medium size castings, it has not only given the company a better competitive position in the gray iron field, but also enables it to compete with other companies using permanent mold and die casting and those producing aluminum and steel castings.

The Brillion foundry has been mechanizing for a long time with the work being done by the engineering staff and maintenance department.

Conveyors for carrying cores, hoists for lifting molds, flasks and accessory equipment; monorails for transporting iron, and mechanized systems for material handling have been installed regularly during the last 15 years.

Shell Casting
The mechanization program was accelerated with the design by plant engineers of a shell island conveyor which transports both shell and dry sand molds on both a horizontal and vertical plane, a distance of 88 feet from the pouring station to the shakeout station.

Although the normal amount of manpower is required to produce castings with the shell mold process, the conveyor reduced the amount of material handling necessary and centralized the operation in one area, increasing per hour production and efficiency.

The automated mold blowing process was a further refinement. The unit will produce 300 18-inch square molds per hour. In the case of the long range was lowered eight inches to provide the dairy plant operators another production method which automatically increases the potential for attracting new kinds of jobs and a wider range of products which should cause growth. Automation has helped the company's safety program because there are more safety devices on the machines and because employees seem to be more aware of the machinery.

More technical people are required with automated equipment because of complex electrical networks and complicated machinery, and employees had to be trained specifically for operation of the automated units.

Community Benefit
Automation also benefits the community because with a higher employment figure comes more buying power. Not to be forgotten is the prestige connected with the installation of such a unit. People have traveled great distances to see "BIW's mold blower", thus increasing the plant's reputation.

Another important factor is the increased demand for housing connected with the company's growth. Brillion is experiencing such a demand at this time because many BIW employees commute from other towns and cities in the area.

Plant Expansion
With increased mechanization and automation, it is important to keep other equipment in good working order. This year, the Brillion Iron Works has embarked on a $144,000 capital improvement project. Not included in the total requirements in allied departments, figure, but already completed at a cost of $40,000 is the new guard by the foundry require cores of house and first aid department.

Adds Strength
From a cost standpoint, the mold-blower is a logical way to strengthen the company's competitive position, but it still does not solve all the company's troubles.

The automated mold blower has increased core room production and payroll. Each casting department. This project will cost $45,000 and will include shower facility and lockers for the 400 men were needed to handle the production employees and, tentatively, a lunch room and space for the plant vending machines.

Effects of Unit
When a plant automates there are certain effects on the community. Since the automated mold of $3,500. A larger throat on the blower unit was a new installa- mold blowing cope machine cost which did not replace ma- $10,000.

In the case of the long range was lowered eight inches to provide the dairy plant operators another production method which automatically increases the potential for attracting new kinds of jobs and a wider air compressor and has installed a new charging scale in the weigh hopper for the cupola metallurgy department. The project installation was at a cost of about $7,400, and replaces machines that have given long service. A new 35-foot shell on top of each cupola was installed for the cupola metallurgy department. The cost of the project was $8,300.

Earlier this year, new shell core blowing machines were installed to keep up with the production of the mold blower. For the same reason, the company last year spent $25,000 for a new cleaning machine which increased the capacity for cleaning castings.

Ten Winnebago 4-H Clubs Receive Awards at Fair

OSHKOSH — Ten Winnebago County 4-H clubs were cited for outstanding cattle-barn exhibits at this year's Winnebago County fair, according to Vernon Peroutky, county agent.

First place honors in that category went to Enterprise Club. The next four places went to United Utica, Mears, Smile-A-While and Lake Shore. Rounding out the winner's circle were Plain Valley, Mikesville, Weaver Valley, Wee Three and Winchester.

In addition to cash awards for the top five entries, a trophy from the dairy plant operators association was presented to the first-place exhibit. Exhibitor rosettes went to the nine runner-up clubs. Providing the cash awards were the county 4-H leaders association and the County Fair Association.

The scoring on exhibits is based on identification, number of animals, decorations, neatness, cleanliness, quality of stock and discipline of exhibitors. Judging is done during the entire fair week, with the official dairy judge being Al Bringe, extension dairyman, University of Wisconsin. Local judges included representatives from the dairy plant operators association.

guerrilla commanders banned their activities here.

The announcement of the fighting from guerrilla Lt. Ali Allouache hit the city as a surprise. Earlier there had been reports of reconciliation and that regular army forces had pulled back from attack positions in the barren hills outside Algiers.

Ben Bella's Political Bureau had called on the 45,000-man regular army and loyal guerrillas to move on Algiers and restore order.

The guerrillas, under the command of Col. Si Hassan, declared they would never attack their investigators because of the noise created by the plane's piston engines.

Also, the U. S. plane was not outfitted with photographic gear, and the crewmen presented no pictures of the shooting. And the guns were not using easily seen tracer bullets, the fliers acknowledged.

After intensive interrogation, however, the higher authorities were convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Navy airmen were telling a straight story.

Saw Guns on Deck

What was described as conclusive evidence came in details supplied by the fliers from their close-in observation.

While their exact distance from the ships was not released, the airmen were said to have been close enough to see seamen using the shoulder fittings of guns about 20mm, or 50-caliber size mounted on the decks of the boats.

Two of the three crewmen said they saw flashes from the muzzles of the guns aimed in their direction.

The pilot told newsmen in Norfolk, Va., Saturday he could not say for certain the attackers were Cuban.

U. S. officials were inclined to assess the shooting as a spur-of-the-moment response by Castro seamen keyed up by their leader's repeated allegations of U. S. aggression and tense from last week's shelling of a Havana suburb by anti-Castro exiles.

Despite Castro's bellicose speechmaking, it was suggested here that the last thing the leftist dictator wants is to get into a real shooting match with the United States.

Kennedy administration authorities also sought to discount recurring reports that Soviet combat troops have arrived in Cuba. Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., contended Friday that 1,200 Russian troops have arrived in the Caribbean land.

week that three satellites showed power drops after the July blast. The announcement Saturday went beyond this to say their communications systems had been knocked out completely.

They are Transit IV B and its companion satellite TRAAC, launched simultaneously last Nov. 15 to help set up an all-weather navigational system, and the U. S. launched British scientific satellite Ariel. The AEC said the radiation belt affected only the solar cell system aboard Transit IV B. A nuclear-powered auxiliary system it carries had failed previously, a spokesman said.

It was somewhat ironic that the British satellite Ariel should have been one of those knocked out.

For it was from Britain that had come the strongest advance protests against the high-altitude test on primarily scientific grounds—as contrasted with those from Communist sources and bomb advocates.

tin's fire station was flooded to the roof, and more than 1,000 refugees huddled for shelter in the wind-whipped railroad station.

Wanda churned Hong Kong's usually placid picture-postcard harbor into a raging cauldron that sent three oceangoing freighters aground, tore seven others loose from their moorings and swamped or sank uncounted hundreds of sampans, junks and other small craft.

Losses Among Refugees

Most of the casualties on land were refugees from Communist China. Their flimsy fishing village shacks were inundated. Squatter huts clinging to Hong Kong's sheer hillsides were swept away by wind and landslides.

Americans, Europeans and other non-Chinese suffered widespread damage to homes, but no injuries. Hundreds of windows were blown out of modern apartment buildings overlooking the harbor.

Wanda also drenched the nearby Portuguese colony of Macao but caused only minor damage there before striking the southern coast of Communist China, where it weakened to gale force. Broadcasts from Red China made no mention of damage or casualties.

Population of World Set at 3.25 Billion

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—With the birth rate doubling the death rate, the world's population has reached an indicated 3.25 billion.

U. N. statistics published Saturday night estimated the world birth rate at 36 per 1,000 population in mid-1961, the death rate at 18 per 1,000.

The baby boom is swelling the world at the rate of almost five million monthly.

At its present growth rate, estimated at 1.8 per cent, the world population could touch the 4-billion mark in less than 15 years.

The figures, covered in the annual U. N. Demographic Yearbook and the latest quarterly population statistics report, indicate China may be near—if it has not passed—the 700-million mark.

Central America with an annual rate of growth of 2.7 per cent was listed as the fastest growing area. Southwest Asia was next with 2.6 per cent. Countries of northern and western Europe showed an increase of only 0.7 per cent a year.

The latest official estimate of U. S. population was given as 185.8 million, as of last April 1. The annual rate of increase in the United States for the 1953-60 period was 1.7 per cent.

India's population was estimated at 440.3 million in mid-1961, the Soviet Union's at 218 million. The latter had a growth rate of 1.7 per cent, the same as the United States.

Post-Crescent Poll Predicts Close Vote

has tried to stop such tendencies by stumping with Kuehn during the last two weeks. He evidently intends to continue through the primary election.

On the issues of the election year, Renk and Kuehn have not differed basically. Both started their campaigns with flat espousals of the general sales tax, with income tax credits, in the dispute about state tax revision. On other subjects there has been little significant difference in their positions.

Renk has attempted, nevertheless, to picture himself as the liberal candidate in the contest, and apparently with some success. He has achieved that position largely through his association with other interests and persons regarded as liberals, and in part out of the fact that Kuehn has been identified during his whole political career as a conservative.

Thus last week Philip F. LaFollette, the former leader of the late Progressive Party and former governor, publicly declared his intention to vote for Renk.

Cut Nephew

LaFollette had another purpose in view. He wanted to disassociate himself from the candidacy of Sucher, who is his nephew, and who has insisted upon publicizing his family connections during the campaign.

But LaFollette's declaration was publicly received as an indication that surviving Progressive Party voters and local leaders were being invited to join the Renk faction of the present-day Republican Party. The impression has been reinforced by the Renk support being shown by other figures formerly identified as Progressives.

While a candidate welcomes all the support he can get in a hard campaign, Renk may find his identification with the erstwhile Progressive Party a liability as well. It is the kind of development that may rally the Republican organization regularly to extra effort for Kuehn. The regulars thought they had throttled the Progressive faction for all time when they drowned the late Sen. Robert M. LaFollette 16 years ago.

Acid Attack

While Republicans generally feel that Kuehn will win the party nomination, the regulars and Kuehn's finely tuned personal organization are leaving nothing to chance. They are not as confident of winning the nomination fight as they are of defeating John W. Reynolds, the prospective Democratic nominee for governor, in the final election in November.

Renk has attacked Kuehn in tones that have become acid at times, although he has also tried to reassure party regulars by announcing that he intends to support the nominee. He has challenged Kuehn to say the same, but Kuehn resolved early in the campaign to stomp the state without referring to his primary rival and has not yet replied to Renk's direct attacks or inquiries.

It has been reliably reported that some of the Republican organization men have chafed at Renk's attacks upon their endorsement policy and their endorsed ticket, but that Kuehn has dissuaded them from making public replies.

Renk's organization, such as it is, has been built largely out of agricultural and related interests. Seed dealers have been the nucleus of his machine. The Renk family farming enterprise has specialized in hybrid seed corn.

Kuehn's backers, besides a coterie of energetic young politicians in Milwaukee, include primarily the working members of the county party organizations disabled physically as to require constant and continuous care, which sent nearly 5,000 delegates and alternates to Milwaukee June to the convention which picked him over Knowles.

State Institutions Cut Number of Admissions

Reduction in Population Due To Liberalized Relief Rules

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Because the laws governing eligibility for relief to the disabled have been liberalized, there has been some reduction in the admissions to state mental institutions and in the population of those institutions resulting from the release of patients for home care.

The state division of mental hygiene reports that thus far 49 patients have been released from three colonies for the care of the mentally retarded, for care in their home communities under the liberalized grants made available under the state-federal program for the support of the disabled.

The program has also probably served to reduce the admission of new patients in some degree, at a time when welfare officers are worried about crowding in the state hospitals and are under the pressure of long waiting lists of patients approved for commitment.

Three Years Ago

The liberalized laws were enacted three years ago. Under the former rule, aid to the disabled grants were limited to those persons "so totally and permanently disabled physically as to require constant and continuous care," which sent nearly 5,000 delegates and alternates to Milwaukee June to the convention which picked him over Knowles.

Kuehn's backers, besides a coterie of energetic young politicians in Milwaukee, include primarily the working members of the county party organizations disabled physically as to require constant and continuous care, which sent nearly 5,000 delegates and alternates to Milwaukee June to the convention which picked him over Knowles.

JoAnne Gunderson Wins 3rd Women's Amateur Crown

Blazes to 9 and 8 Victory Over 17-Year-Old Ann Baker

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—Jo didn't cool her off a bit on this Anne Gunderson, a 23-year-old hot, humid day. She promptly strawberry blonde from Kirkland, picked up three more birdies to Wash., riddled the Country Club go with the four birdies and a of Rochester course with slash- ing, sub-par golf Saturday and the morning round, made the captured her third Women's Na- tional Amateur Championship with a 9 and 8 victory over 17- year-old Ann Baker of Maryville, Tenn.

Miss Gunderson, who won her first championship when she was 18 in 1957 and repeated in 1960, blended her power with remark- able putting in shooting a 2-under- par 70 while building a 6-up lead in the morning 18 holes over the 6,161-yard, par 36-36—72 course. The 90-minute break for lunch

Tommy Bolt Takes Lead in Dallas Tourney

Comes From 15th Place With Round Of 5-Under-Par

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Tommy Bolt put on a great putting splurge Saturday to shoot a 5-under-par 65 and pull himself from 15th place into the lead at 36 holes in the $35,000 Dallas Open Golf Tournament.

The tempestuous Bolt, once noted more for throwing tantrums and clubs than his golf, had 10 one-putt greens and would have had virtually perfect putting day but for a hunk of mud. He said it caused him to miss an 18-footer on No. 11 where he took his only bogey.

His 36 for 36 holes gave him a stroke lead.

Juan (Chi-Chi) Rodriguez, the tiny Puerto Rican, and Paul Bonedson, the long hitter from Illinois, who were co-leaders of the tournament with 67 after the first round, found the 6,658-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course suddenly grown into a monster—they soared to 75 and 76 respec- tively and fell down with the hungry pack.

Cost Too Much
Bolt, the 44-year-old former Na- tional Open champion, hasn't been doing very well this year despite the fact that he no longer throws clubs (he said he quit because it cost too much). He has won only $5,511 and the last tournament he bagged was last year when he took the Pensacola Open.

Billy Maxwell, the red-haired Texan who registers from Las Vegas, Nev., shot a scrambling 70 to pull into second place at 136. Maxwell had a peculiar round. Three times he birdied a hole then bogey the next. He had a 25-foot chip in on 6 for is last birdie.

Bolt was quite confident as he posted his 65. "Two 69's will win it," he said, "and I think I can do it."

He had a 10-foot putt on the second hole, a 12-footer on 4, a 9- footer on 5, chipped within eight inches of the hole on 7 after he had missed the green and got his par, banged a birdie on 10 with a 5-footer, a 15-footer on 12 and got a par on 13 although he missed the green and also parred 15 despite being in the rough and having to hit through trees.

Rodriguez shot himself out of the lead on the very first hole when he was stymied by a tree, hit the tree trying to get at the first ball and wound up with a double bogey 6. He chipped in for an eagle from 65 feet out on 14 for his only good shot of the day.

Buffalo's Tom Allen Defends Sailing Title In Lightning Class

PT. ABINO, Ont. (AP)—Tom Allen of Buffalo, faring well in Lake Erie's southeasterly gales, successfully defended his North American lightning-class sailing championship Saturday.

Allen retained his title despite a failure to log a first-place fin- ish in any of five races since Monday.

The 31-year-old boatbuilder placed fifth and sixth in Satur- day's two races, to give him an overall record of 3-2-5-5-6 for 139 points.

Indiana Fullback Out For Two Weeks

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP)— Indiana's football squad ran through its first two fall drills Saturday stressing fundamentals, and Coach Phil Dickens an- nounced the temporary loss of fullback Tom Nowatzke.

Dickens said the big sophomore from Michigan City, Ind., would be out at least two weeks with a foot injury suffered recently in a football game. The injury pre- vented a planned stretch of full- back Tom Nowatzke of Gary in- and.

Crimson Satan Scores Initial Stakes Victory

Winner Survives Foul Claim by Jockey in Second

CHICAGO (AP)—Crimson King Farm's Crimson Satan, 2-year-old champion of 1961 but a disappoint- ment this year, finally scored his first stakes victory of the year Saturday.

Moving strongly around the stretch turn, Crimson Satan car- ried top weight of 123 pounds to a 2 1/2-length decision in the $33,925 Laurance Armour Handicap at Arlington Park.

Tumble Turbie, a 35-1 shot, fin- ished second and Gushing Wind, the 6-5 favorite, was third in the mile and one-sixteenth grass race for 3-year-olds.

Crimson Satan, who previously this season had lost two stakes because of disqualifications, sur- vived a foul claim by jockey Rudy Campas, rider of Tumble Turbie, who charged interference.

Racing over the grass for the first time, Crimson Satan was timed in 1 minute 42 second one- fifth of a second slower than the track record. He earned $20,425 to boost his 1962 earnings to $81,187. Last year he earned $302,300. Crimson Satan paid $8.80, $6.20 and $3.60. Tumble Turbie re- turned $23 and $9.20 while show price on Gushing Wind was $2.80.

Crimson Satan won the Jersey Derby last Memorial Day but was disqualified and placed third be- cause of a foul. Four weeks later he won the Leonard Richards Stakes at Delaware Park, but later he was disqualified for the purse money because a drug, hutholizidin, was found in a test.

Crimson Satan, ridden by Ave- lino Gomez, was seventh early in the field of 10 as Gushing Wind, Greek Form and Below Deck bat- tled for the lead heads apart. Leaving the far turn, Crimson Stan made a strong move. He took the lead in the early stretch and galloped home from there be- fore a crowd of 27,204.

Papers Say Stengel Has New Contract

NEW YORK (AP)—Casey Stengel, 72-year-old manager of the New York Mets, will be back for another season next year, three New York newspapers said in dispatches from St. Louis Sat- urday.

The New York Post, Journal-American and Daily News said Stengel has agreed to guide the Mets, now in last place in the 10 team National League, again next year. The Mets were in St. Louis to play the Cards.

Stengel, fired as the manager of the New York Yankees two years ago, currently has a one- year contract with the New Na- tional League team.

The papers said he will sign for about $80,000 with the condi- tion that he be allowed to resign at any time if he finds the physical pace too strenuous, that he be given a strong voice in shaping the team, and that some of his players be given salary raises.

Kaukauna, Green Bay Teams Post Victories

Jack Coenen Fires 1-Hitter in First Game of Tournament

MENASHA — Powers Pub (Kau- kauna) and Zieffe Opticians (Green Bay) won first round games in the Menasha Macs Labor Day Weekend Softball Tourna- ment here Saturday afternoon.

Jack Coenen spun a one-hitter for Powers, a 9-3 winner, but al- lowed three runs due to wildness. He walked six, fanned the same number, and hit two batters.

Zieffe defeated Shamrock of Kaukauna, 4-0.

Al Fredrickson belted a double in the fifth for the only hit off Coenen. Powers pulled off three snappy double plays to highlight the defensive play.

The winners scored four times with the aid of a hit off Arlyn Poes. Powers received three walks and were benefited by a hit batsman and two errors in the first frame.

Don Rhode fired a 2-hit shutout

HILBERT — The Hilbert High man last year, as did Don Fed- School football team will get its ersvitz, a center and defensive first taste of a full-conference end. schedule during the approaching campaign.

Hilbert inaugurated football two years ago and has since com- end. Stack said. He praised Mike Halbach's work in the scrimmage competition until Little Nine con- ference scheduling could be ar- ranged.

New head football coach John Stack is working with a squad of 32 candidates, including 14 letter- men, grooming them for the league opener Sept. 7 at Reeds- ville.

Lack of depth could hurt the Wolves, Stack said. He added that the scrimmage at Chilton was en- couraging on some points but showed that the pass defense needed work.

Stack replaces Jack Verdette for about $80,000 with the condi- tion that he be allowed to resign at any time if he finds the physical pace too strenuous, that he be given a strong voice in shaping the team, and that some of his players be given salary raises.

Washington Tips Angels in 11th, 3-2

Bob Schmidt's Homer Gives Senators' Tom Cheney Win

WASHINGTON (APM) — Bob Schmidt lined a home run into the Washington bullpen with two out in the 11th inning Saturday night to give the Senators a 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Angels and preserve a superb pitching per- formance by Tom Cheney.

The loss dropped the Angels 4 1/2 games behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

Cheney held the Angels to two hits for the first eight innings and seemed safe at the start of the ninth with a two-run lead. But Lee Thomas hit a blooping single after one out and Leon Wagner poked his 33rd home run over the right field fence.

The four hits were the only blows given up by Cheney in his 10-inning stint. He fanned 10. Ed Hobaugh worked the 11th inning and got credit for the victory. Dan Osinski, the fourth Angels' pitcher, was the loser.

Schmidt's homer, his 9th, came on his first time at bat in the game. He replaced Ken Retz- er after Retzer singled in the ninth and went out for a pinch runner.

Jim King's 11th home run in the fourth gave Cheney a second run to work with after the Sen- ators scored one in the first off Dean Chance.

Pirates Rally For 7-6 Win

Dick Groat Leads 15-Hit Attack By Pittsburgh

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates pounded out 15 hits and came from behind with a three-run rally in the sixth in- ning to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-6 Saturday night.

Dick Groat led the Pirate as- sault on three pitchers with a triple, double and two singles in five trips.

Tom Sturdivant won his eighth game in 11 decisions but needed help from Jack Lamabe in the sixth and Elroy Face came on in the ninth when the first two bat- ters hit safely.

An infield out and Clay Wad- rymple's single brought in the runs before Face got Ruben Amaro to bounce to short into a game-ending double play.

Jim Owens lost his fourth against two wins.

UW's Richter Among Nation's Top Gridders Seeking 1962 Acclaim

Growing Number Of Giant-Sized Athletes Ready

BY BOB HOORING
Associated Press Sports Writer

All-America Dave Behrman, Jim Dunaway and Sonny Gibbs illustrate the growing number of outsized athletes ready to battle for 1962 college football acclaim.

Since the days of dear old grand-daddy, the adage has changed so it now goes: "The bigger they are, the harder they are to move out of the line-up."

Returning from the top eleven of 1961, Michigan State's Behrman throws his 253 pound, 6-foot-4 frame into his new center assignment. He had been a tackle and guard.

Behrman's chief pivot rivals appear to be Ray Mansfield of Washington, 235, and Lee Roy Jordan, 207, of defending national champion Alabama.

Mississippi's bowl regulars, again Southeastern Conference title candidate, offer awesome, 260 Dunaway in the crowded field at tackle.

Gibbs Top Quarterback

When it comes to scanning the defense or getting off a pass, quarterback Gibbs of Texas Christian is head and shoulders above the rest—6-7, 230 to be exact.

The gifted Gibbs, erratic in the past, was pronounced vastly improved by Coach Abe Martin off spring drills.

Pat Richter of Wisconsin cuts an imposing figure at end. The 6-6 230-pound ace who collected the most yards nationally as a receiver last year is rivaled offensively by Hugh (The Phantom) Campbell of Washington State and Kentucky's Tom Hutchinson.

Campbell is nearing the all-time career mark for number of catches while Hutchinson is likened to Don Hutson in ability to get open.

Others in Category

While John Mackey, 6-2, 220, of Syracuse and top-notch blocker Ted Davis of Georgia Tech belong in the same category, defensive ends of special note include Penn State's Dave Robinson (6-3, 220), Tony Liscio of Tulsa (6-5, 235), Forest Farmer of Purdue (6-1, 211) and UCLA's Met Profit (6-5, 215).

Other ends in the race for special honors are Hal Bedsole, Southern California; John Ellerson, Army; Clyde Childers, Georgia; Conrad Hitchler, Missouri; Cloyd Webb, Iowa; Marv Fleming, Utah; Roger Locke, Arizona State.

Back to that impressive tackle delegation, watch the speed and mobility of such giants as Oregon's Steve Barnett (252), Bob Bell of Minnesota (6-1, 214), the Ohio State twosome of Bob Vogel (232) and Daryl Sanders (236), Cleveland Browns draftee Roger Shoals of Maryland (240), Penn State's Charlie Sieminski (245), Virginia's Dave Graham (238) and the year's sleeper—Ken Kortas, 6-4, 317, from the University of Louisville.

Georgia Tech claims the sharpest two-way guard anywhere in Dave Watson, the lad who blasted Joe Auer to two Gator Bowl scores and stands out at middle guard. Jack Cverko returns from his injury-enforced layoff to contest the issue at Northwest, Mickey Ording of Oregon, Texas' Mary Kubin and John Treadwell, Mike Fritsch of Rice, Baylor's Bob Burk, Howie Breinig of Arizona, Michigan's Dick Szymanski, Bob Lehmann of Notre Dame, Oklahoma's Leon Cross, Ray Schoenke of SMU, UCLA's Joe Bauwens and Arkansas' Tommy Brasher also are in the running.

Offense Specialises

Total offense specialists Pat McCarthy of Holy Cross, Dave Hoppmann of Iowa State, Terry Baer of Oregon State and Mississippi's Glynn Giffing won't without a fight. Hoppmann, originally set for quarter as the Cy-clones switch from single wing to wing-T, may go back to half.

The quarterback crop also includes among the leading contenders Alex Syskowski of Wichita, pass-master Gerry Gross of DePaul, Miami's George Mira, little Larry Libertore of Florida, Billy Cox of Rice, Iowa's Malt Szykowny, Dick Shiner of Maryland, Dartmouth's Bill King, Ron Digravio of Purdue, Dave Glinka of Michigan, Kansas' Rodger McGee.

For versatility the best half-backs may prove to be Tennessee tailback Mallon Faircloth, Jerry Stovall of LSU, Washington's Charlie Mitchell and Ron Goodwin of Baylor. But don't overlook Iowa speedster Larry Ferguson, out with a knee injury in '61, who averaged 7.39 yards per carry two years ago.

Top Scorer Returns

James (Preacher) Pilot of New Mexico State, the nation's top scorer and ground gainer of last fall, returns to defend honors along with his constant challenger, Pete Pedro of West Texas State.

George Saimes, the line backer with halfback speed, must be in any listing of fullbacks along with Bill (Thunder) Thornton of Nebraska, Capt. Mike Lind of Notre Dame, Ben Wilson of USC, Billy Joe of Villanova and the rugged Southwest Conference trio of Ray Paoge, Texas; Tommy Joe Crutcher, TCU, and Conlidge Hunt, Texas Tech.

Defensively, two names stand out alone at fullback—Steve Ward, captain of LUS's famed Chinese Bandits, and Pat Culpepper of Texas.

The hospital reported his father was expected to fly to Harrisburg Saturday night, from Mundy, Tex., Amerson's home town.

The 23-year-old Amerson joined the Eagles last year after a college career at Texas Tech. The 6-foot-1, 186-pounder played in parts of all 14 regular season games.

Notre Dame '11' Has First Drills

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—Notre Dame went through morning and afternoon drills Saturday with Joe Kuharich indicating the Irish would get their first bit of contact work either Tuesday or Wednesday.

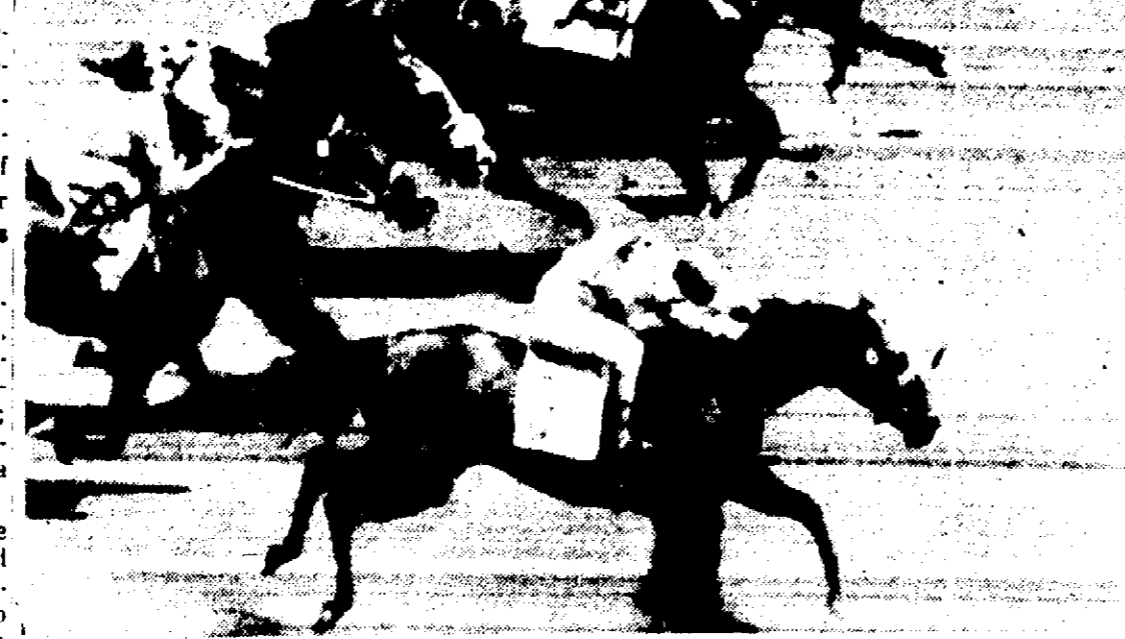

The Irish will be off Sunday, but two-day drills will resume Monday.

'Bump' Elliot Begins Search for Ends as Michigan '11' Drills

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A search for ends began for Michigan's 69-man football squad Saturday as fall practice opened with two drills.

The only absentee was sophomore Jim Green of Trenlon, Mich., a 210-pound center sidelined with a boil on his elbow, but was expected to return Monday.

With Jockey Eugene Monacelli aboard, Beechwood, No. 11, won this photo finish race at Atlantic City, N. J. Saturday. Honest Crusade, No. 6, was second and End of the Rainbow, No. 7, was third. The winner paid $21.40. (AP Wirephoto)

If you are planning to attend the sports car races next weekend at Elkhart Lake and are confused with the numerous classes of sports cars, don't become frustrated. Probably nine out of 10 sports car "experts" are as confused as you are.

There are no less than eight classes for "Production," or Grand Touring cars, and six classes for "Modified," or Sports cars.

To further confuse an already mystified public, the Sports Car Club of America, which controls racing at Elkhart Lake, does not use the same classification system as the Federation Internationale de l'Automobile which is the governing body for international racing.

There was a time when all you had to do is check the engine displacement of a car and you knew what class it raced in. A car of one displacement raced against popular makes and the classes of cars of like displacements and they will be racing in Saturday and also the modified classes for the big 500 on Sunday.

Production Classes: Class A—Aston Martin DB-4 GT, Corvette 327, Ferrari 250 GT w-94.5-in. wheelbase, Jaguar XK-E.

Class B—All other Aston Martins, Corvette 283, Ferrari 250 GT w-102.4-in. wheelbase, Mercedes 300-SL, Porsche Carrera.

Class C—Ac-Bristol, Jaguar (except XK-E), Lotus Elite Stage III, Porsche Super 90.

Class D—Austin Healey 3000, Alfa Romeo Veloce, Lotus 7 Classic, Porsche 1500-S and 1600-S.

Class F—Fiat 1500 Spider, Mercedes 190-SL, MGA, Porsche 1500-N and 1600-N, Sunbeam Alpine.

Class G—Austin-Healey Sprite Mk II, Alfa Giulietta, Fiat-Abarth 850, Lotus 7 American, MG Midget Mk II, Porsche 1300 and 1300-S.

Class H—Austin-Healey Sprite, Fiat Abarth 750-GT, MG T-series, NSU Sport Prinz.

Modified Classes:

Class H—up to 750 cc; Class G—751-1100 cc; Class F—1101-1600 cc; Class E—1601-2000 cc; Class D—2001-3000 cc, and Class C—over 3001 cc.

Hire Professional Jinx Man

Colts to Try to Put Whammy on Phillies

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—If the Phillies feel a chill running down their backs Monday and Tuesday they can't blame the weather. It will be a combination of rabbit feet, horseshoes and the whammy of a pro whammy maker.

The Houston Colts, who meet Philadelphia on those days, arranged the mass demonstration of magic in an effort to avoid humiliation. For never in modern baseball history has one major league team won all the season's games from another.

And the Phillies are just three games away from placing such a record in the book.

The Colts and the Phillies meet in a two-night doubleheader Monday and a single game Tuesday night to end their season series. The teams have met 5 times and the Phillies have taken every game.

To Wear No. 13

The Colts have hired a professional jinx man, and Houston pitcher Dick Farrell will wear No. 13 on his uniform, shifting from his usual No. 43.

All fans who carry a horseshoe, four-leaf clover or rabbit's foot to the opener will be admitted for half price.

The hex man, young Kid Dugan of Hot Springs, Ark., is full of optimism about the Colts.

"There ain't no cinches on anything," Dugan said, "but I want to tell you something. I got more going for the Colts in this series than I ever had before. I got one Philly player picked out—and I mean I have put the triple whammy on him. He's dead now and don't know it."

Mahaffey to Start

Dugan said he had heard Phillies Manager Gene Mauch plans to start his No. 1 pitcher, Art Mahaffey, against the Colts in the Monday opener.

"I got nothing against him (Mauch), but I am really giving my very best stuff to the Phillies because I love Houston and Galveston. I have friends here. Mauch may not know it, but his luck has run out on him."

Concerning Mahaffey, Dugan

said: "I have my Slobotkee Stars ready for him. He won't finish night. I was very pleased with a couple of passes and completed the game. And I've been praying the outcome," he went on, "My timing still is off but not run options."

Laver Records Easy Win in National Meet

Margaret Smith Also Advances; Miss Hard Cops

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (AP)—Rod Laver and Margaret Smith, Australia's top-seeded one-two punch, began mopping-up operations with swift straight-set victories Saturday in the National Tennis Championships.

The red-haired Laver, seeking to duplicate Don Budge's grand slam of 1938, toyed with Eleazar Davidman, Israel's No. 1 player, before a crowd of 6,000 in the West Side Stadium. Laver won 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

It was obvious the left-handed Australian could have won as he pleased. But he didn't seem to want to exert himself on a humid, 90-degree afternoon.

Miss Smith, the powerfully-built Sydney girl who has won every major women's crown this year except Wimbledon, polished off Sharon Pritula, a cute 16-year-old Detroit junior, 6-0, 6-1. It took just 30 minutes.

Miss Pritula, holder of the National Women's hadminton crown, met an opponent who not only outweighed her some 50 pounds but overwhelmed her with stroking power.

Advancing with Miss Smith was the defending champion, Darlene Hard of Long Beach, Calif., a 6-3, 6-4 victor over Rita Bentley of England.

Not Pleased

Miss Hard was not at all pleased with the way she played. "I was terrible—I could have lost," she said. "I'll meet Jan Lehane of Australia in the next round. If I can beat her, I may be able to pace myself the rest of the way."

While Australia was baring its teeth, the Soviet Union, playing for the first time on the West Side courts, was getting its bumps as well as its bouquets.

Sergei Likhachev, husky Russian from Baku, dropped a two-day, five-set marathon to left-handed Jim McManus of Berkeley, Calif., and figured in the first incident involving visitors from behind the Iron Curtain.

Likhachev complained of a line call in the match which McManus won 4-6, 16-18, 2-10, 6-1, 6-4.

The Russian won two of the first three sets in 3 hours of slashing tennis which had to be called after the third set because of darkness. McManus, a blond University of California student, got a quick jump in the resumption of play Saturday.

In the sixth game of the last set, however, Likhachev blasted a ball down the line which appeared to be good. Lineman Trippy Van Wyck called it out.

The Russian looked at the line man unbelievably. The umpire asked Van Wyck to repeat his decision. "It was out," the lineman said. Likhachev was bitter. "It was 6 inches inside," he told an interpreter. The call gave McManus a 4-2 lead. He went on to take the set and match.

Second Victory

Toomas Lejus, a blond, good-looking student from Tallinn, gave the Soviet Union its second victory when he polished off Evert Schneider of the Netherlands, 6-1, 6-4, 7-4. Sixteen-year-old Alexander Metreveli won an earlier match.

Fred Stolle of Australia, seeded fifth, got better as his match progressed in disposing of Fin Dag Jagge of Norway 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

Gifford Insists He Has Lost Nothing in Year He Was Gone

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP)—"as bad as I thought it would be," Frank Gifford, the New York Giant, added. "But that comes Giants' All-Pro halfback who is from not getting enough work in back in the National Football League was after a one-year lay-off, admitted Friday he made a mistake but insisted he had lost nothing football-wise in being away from the game for a season.

Gifford retired after receiving a deep concussion from a hard tackle by Philadelphia Eagles' linebacker Chuck Bednarik when the two teams were battling for the Eastern Conference title late in the 1960 season. He spent last year as a Giants' scout.

"I didn't care too much for the way I quit," the handsome, 32-year-old Southern California former All-America said. "It wasn't a good way to go out and I made a mistake in quitting when I did."

But during the time that the Giants have been preparing for the NFL campaign at their Fair- field University camp, Gifford has been working as hard as the raw-rookie "Because," he said, "I need it."

Hurt My Back

"I know I didn't lose anything by being out a year and when I came to camp I was ready to 'play football,'" he said. "But I hurt my back in the second week of training and couldn't do much work for nearly two weeks."

"Why, I didn't get my first real hurt."

Bosox Rally, Edge Minnesota, 5-4

Twins Drop Four Full Games Off Pace in American League

BOSTON (AP)—Boston second baseman Chuck Schilling drew a bases-loaded walk to cap a ninth-inning uprising as the Red Sox beat Minnesota 5-4 Saturday and knocked the Twins four full games off the American League pace.

A walk, two singles, a wild pitch and an intentional walk preceded the deciding play. The final base on balls was served up by veteran Ray Moore, third pitcher of the inning for the losers.

Until then it had appeared that Harmon Killebrew's 36th homer, a two-run belt in the sixth inning and Frank Sullivan's relief had saved a 4-3 triumph for southpaw Jack Kralick, who tossed a no-hitter his last time out.

Late Outburst

The Sox' late outburst was a damaging blow to the Minnesota pennant aspirations. New York's pacesetters were beating Kansas City 3-1 at the same time.

Lu Clinton worked Sullivan for a walk as Boston's leadoff batter in the ninth. Then Frank Malone dropped a little pop fly single into short left and Bob Tiltman singled sharply down the third base line for the tying run.

Pete Runnels, the league's leading batter, fell quickly behind in the count, 0 and 2, attempting to

Famous Grid Trainer Dies in Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Oliver J. Devictor, 78, widely known athletic trainer, died Saturday in his sleep at his home here.

Devictor, who had trained 10 teams for football bowl games in his career, had retired in 1958 as athletic trainer for the University of Missouri.

Before coming to Missouri in 1935, he had served as trainer at Washington University in St. Louis, the University of Pittsburgh and Kansas State.

Muskie Fishing Always the Same: Lots of Sun, Bad Arm

BY JAY REED
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor
ARBOR VITAE — Muskie fishing never changes.
You work the weedbeds, you work the sandbars, you work the riffles off points of land. And always it's the same. You work. Sometimes it pays off. Most of the time, however, about all you have to show for your effort is a sunburned face and a sore arm.

Lower Arbor Vitae Didn't Produce On One Trip but Writer Vows to Work Famed Northern Lake Again

last we wrapped it up and headed for the barn. But it might have been different. And that's why we haven't seen the last of Arbor Vitae and the warm sun and the gentle breeze of the public boat landing beside Highway 70. How long, after all, can a muskie resist a plug? So much like a sucker it could fool another sucker? That's what I want to know—how long?

BOTH BARRELS

DRUMMOND, Wis. — Any lingering doubts a man has about the immensity of fall disappears quickly once you arrive here in this wilderness country of northwestern Wisconsin. When you drive across County Trunk M from Clam Lake to Cable you see Sumac already turned red as a deer hunter's underwear.

Set Longest Bird Season

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — The longest pheasant season in Nebraska history, and probably again as last year, the longest statewide season in the U.S.—that's the 86 days of pheasant hunting announced for Nebraska this fall. Dates are Oct. 27 through Jan. 20, 1963.

All along Highway 70 from Woodruff-Minocqua to Fildfield through the sprawling Chequamegon National Forest you see maples with leaves showing a hint of yellow. Ferns once lush with summer green are now brown. And all this is but an indication of things to come. Give this country another three to four weeks and there'll be more color here than in a hundred rainbows.

Lincoln, Neb. — The longest pheasant season in Nebraska history, and probably again as last year, the longest statewide season in the U.S.—that's the 86 days of pheasant hunting announced for Nebraska this fall. Dates are Oct. 27 through Jan. 20, 1963.

In about 260 miles of driving, much of it in the early morning we saw just one deer. That was a small doe standing beside the road just out of Butternut in Ashland County. But the time for deer movement is not yet at hand. The weather is still too warm for that. When the nights grow cool with a hint of frost the deer will be on the move. You'll see them then beside the road and in fields.

An undersized northern took a half-hearted poke at a wobbly spoon once but that, in total, was the fishing action for the day. The plugs and spoons looked thrillingly alive in the clear water. It made a man wonder how the fish could possibly resist. But resist they did. For three hours they resisted so diligently that at Both Barrels will be spending about four days here at a camp on Pigeon Lake. Our time will be limited but we're going to give this lake a good fishing test before we leave. They tell me the bass have been hitting fairly well. I don't know what else, if anything, the lake contains.

The best bet for full bags is central Nebraska, where 23 per cent in pheasants is reported. This area has been best in recent years. The western part of the state, another prime area, has approximately the same number of birds as last year. Elsewhere, in the marginal areas, pheasants are under that of 1961.

This is pretty fair muskie country but I haven't heard anyone shouting very loud about the fish which have been taken so far this summer. That's a good indication that things have been slow. Generally speaking, resort country people will broadcast it far and wide if there's even a hint of good fishing.

For the mixed-bag hunter, there is a 60-day season on quail, Oct. 27 through Christmas, an increase of 16 days over 1961. This is in the southern part of the state, where the population is at least equal to last year and probably a little better. Limits are 6 daily and 18 in possession.

To end this thing about where we started, there's one more indication of fall going on right down in Appleton these days. Moose hunters, like spawning walleyes, are getting set for the annual run into Canada. The season in Ontario opens Oct. 1.

Nelson Backs Federal Aid For Outdoors

Gov. Gaylord Nelson, a Democrat candidate for the U.S. Senate, called today for a federal program to match on a nationwide scale Wisconsin's $50 million program for preservation of outdoor resources.

Boh VanderVelden, Wally Hillsberg, Doug Peltermann and Larry Lawrence are going to go back in the Lac Seul country off the Red Lake Road again. My good friend Tom Cahoe also is heading a party which will work the same general area. Others are getting ready, too. Both Barrels is going to leave about the 28th or 29th of September for Ontario. It's sort of like a drug — once you're on it, it's hard to kick the habit.

Speaking in Sheboygan, the governor said "America is at a crisis in its outdoor resources." "Unless we move now," Nelson said in a prepared speech at a luncheon, "it is possible to foresee a nightmare in which fishermen line the banks of every stream, hunters stumble over each other in our forests and boats require traffic signals to maintain order on the lakes."

Competitive Shooting Begins at Local Club

No Matter the Layout, Trap Shooting Always Fired Under Same Set of Rules

If you were to drive along Ohio same rules as any other club in Route 440 just west from Vandalia the nation.

The trap field looks like a fan with five "walks," each of which points straight at a little house 16 yards to the front. From the 16-yard line, the walks run back to 27 yards because there is more than one way to shoot the game.

The usual trap game is 16-yard singles. Each of the five shooters on the squad takes up a shooting position and fires five shots at the clay targets that fly from the low traphouse. Then they pause while everyone moves to the next position. In this way, each shooter fires five shots from each of the five positions for a total of 25.

On the north side of the road are the home grounds of the Amateur Trapshooting Association and some 2,700 shooters gather there to compete in the Grand American Handicap, national championship event of the annual ATA trapshooting tournament.

Each year at this time we get numerous complaints from fishermen of pleasure boats, sometimes large groups of them, creating hazardous wakes and much discomfort for the smaller boats.

Literally a mile of trap fields lines the grounds and every day of the week-long event more than 2,000 shooters vie for national titles.

At this time of the year pleasure boats probably outnumber fishermen on most waters. There are a few, however, numerous fishermen out especially in the morning and again in the evening, and they do have a right to be there.

But this is really the end of our story. Competitive shotgun shooting begins at local gun clubs and there is bound to be one near your home town. The club may be an elaborate affair with several fields. It may be just a tent for a clubhouse and a pile of railroad ties to guard the trap loader.

We believe the only answer is good judgment by all parties. It is going to be necessary for all persons using the water to "give a little."

Whatever layout your club has, trapshooting is fired under the same rules.

Each year at this time we get numerous complaints from fishermen of pleasure boats, sometimes large groups of them, creating hazardous wakes and much discomfort for the smaller boats.

The group will make plans for ushering at the games, taking movies of home tilts and special events during the season.

Another section states, "no person shall anchor any boat in the out of doors at this time of the year. State law prohibits the possession of any rifle or shotgun on inland waters unless and legally marked so as to be of the state, or places where wild game is found from Aug. 15 to the opening of the duck season. Please obey the law and protect yourself and the game. Remember the game you save today, your son may use for creating a hazardous wake, enjoy tomorrow."

Following the business session film highlights of the 1961 Green Bay Packer season will be shown. Refreshments and lunch will be served.

White Sox Catcher of Early 1930s Is Dead

Any full-choke, 12-gauge shotgun will do for trapshooting. True, the ardent shooters have guns with ventilated ribs, two-bead barrels and specially built gun stocks, but you don't need these.

Pictures are Evidence Camera Becomes Significant Tool In State Game Law Enforcement

MADISON — The camera has become a significant tool in the enforcement of the fish and game and other Wisconsin conservation laws. "Bringing a camera" is the message increasingly sent over the conservation department's radio and telephone communications networks as conservation wardens and other field men communicate with each other and with their superiors in their day to day patrols and investigations. The camera has been found to be vital in the warden's task of gathering evidence for the courts at the several area headquarters of law that is complete, as well as convincing. Nothing is more effective as a set of photographs accurately describing the scene of a law violation—within the necessary rules of court procedure on such exhibits. Photography has become the hobby of an increasing number of the men who patrol the woods, waters of the state for the protection of its wildlife and other natural resources, a conservation department bulletin relates. Their personal equipment is supplemented by cameras available

Van Oudenhoven Loft Wins Race From Minnesota

MINNAPOLIS — The Van Oudenhoven loft had the winning pigeon in last week's Valley Flying Club race from Rochester, Minn. The field of 482 birds from 38 lofts were liberated at 8 a.m. Sunday and the winner returned to 11:43:15 a.m. for a time of 1,242:20 yards per minute. The Bosmans loft was second in 1,241:70 and Sager Brothers finished third with 1,239:29. The birds raced in clear weather against southwest winds.

Rash of No-Hit Games Has Quelled Wails About Lively Baseball

NEW YORK (AP)—Where, oh where, has the rabbit run? Just about a year ago, big league sluggers, led by Mickey Vernon and Roger Maris, were causing consternation among devotees of inside, strategic baseball by blasting a record number of home runs, many of them for unprecedented distances. "There's too much jackrabbit in the ball," wailed the low run scoring game lovers. "The hitters are making a joke of the game. Something should be done to deaden the ball and help the poor pitchers."

SMU Center Collapses From Heat Stroke on First Day of Practice

DALLAS (AP)—Mike Kelsy, first-string center for Southern Methodist University, collapsed from what a university spokesman called a heat stroke Saturday—first day of Southwest Conference football practice. He was hospitalized at Baylor Medical Center. Lester Jordan, spokesman for the athletic department, said Kelsy probably will be out for several days.

Club Championship Will be Decided at Riverview Monday

Two special events are scheduled for Monday at the Riverview Country Club, according to Jake Matthews, pro. A best-ball twosome will be conducted for the first time in place of the annual Labor Day program. The finals of the club championship also will be played with Eric Schulenberg meeting Mark Meyer. Schulenberg advanced to the finals by beating Tom McKenzie, 2 and 1 in the semis.

Father Patrick Shaules, Jesuit priest, smiles as he talks with some of the students attending Catholic schools in the Portuguese colony of Macao on the south China coast. ## Educators Battle Over Young Minds in Macao

Communist Influence Being Slashed In Concerted Effort by Christians

BY RONNIE WEI

MACAO (AP)—Roman Catholic churchmen and educators here feel they have scored a victory in a battle for the minds of youth. A private survey shows 4 per cent of Macao's 47,489 students attend Catholic schools while 28 per cent go to Communist or Protestant schools and the rest attend government and Protestant schools.

Macao is a Portuguese colony on the south China coast.

The Rev. Patrick Shaules, an American Jesuit priest, said this battle for minds is "as grim and vital as that in the jungles of Viet Nam."

"Here," he said, "we can't use physical force. We must fight with ideas."

In most points of contact between Communists and non-Communists around the world there is a clear-cut division and obvious tension—a wall in Berlin, the strait in Formosa, even barbed wire in Hong Kong. But here both sides compete peacefully.

Communists monopolize at least 80 per cent of Macao's trade. Three of the four Chinese-language newspapers are Communist. The tide turned gradually. Only one of the 11 theaters is non-Communist.

Red Control

The Chinese Communists also helped control the best-organized labor unions. Members' children are required to attend Communist schools. Nearly all the non-Catholic schools in this colony were Communist-infiltrated in 1953. Enrollment in Catholic schools was less than 8,000.

Teachers openly taught Communist propaganda. The Macao government did not interfere, presumably for fear of upsetting the delicate political equilibrium here.

Hundreds of students went to mainland China every year for further study.

The religious authorities launched a campaign in 1954 to combat this influence.

Catholic schools charging nominal fees sprang up. Well-trained teachers were imported from Hong Kong, Manila and Formosa to give young students what the Catholics call a proper education. The tide turned gradually. Donations of American surplus food and reports of spreading hunger in Communist China helped. Each student in Catholic schools was given rice, flour and bread daily.

The East-West struggle focused printed propaganda and a loudspeaker campaign of anti-American and anti-Nationalist propaganda across the school fence.

Court-Ordered Alabama Units Plan for Vote

Reapportionment Won't be Tested by Sept. 11 Runoff

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—Unless the U. S. Supreme Court intervenes, Alabama on Nov. 6 will elect a legislature reapportioned by the first federal court order of its kind in the nation's history.

Democrats, traditionally in the majority, have taken the first step to comply with the historic judicial decree by nominating new candidates in counties which gained or lost representation.

Voters in 21 of the state's 67 counties chose 26 nominees in a special primary Tuesday, and 12 others to be nominated in a runoff Sept. 11.

GOP Move

Republicans, making a strong bid to regain the one House seat in Winston County which they once held and to take others away from the rival party, have already put up nominees for six out of 35 seats in the Senate and 21 out of 106 in the lower chamber. They may nominate still more.

The unprecedented decision handed down six weeks ago by a three-judge panel in Montgomery—has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Six counties gained a total of 19 House seats under the historic reapportionment decree, and 19 others lost one each, to leave the membership at the present level.

New Nominees

Since all counties in the state had nominated House and Senate candidates in the regular primaries last May, it was necessary to choose new nominees where the number was changed by the judicial order.

The federal judges put their reapportionment order into effect after the legislature itself failed to comply with a do-or-we-will ultimatum.

Writer Discusses Critic's Position In World of Art

Mistakes of the Past Weigh Heavily on Today's Judgments

BY FRANZ SCHULZE

Chicago Daily News Service

Since this is the art world's quiet season, it might be an appropriate time to indulge in some reflections — including several possibly unpopular ones — on the broad subject of artists and art critics.

The traditional relationship between the two groups has probably never been ideally fraternal, but in the past century or so it has been especially rife with heat and hostility. During this stretch of time the artist, more than ever before in history, has become a kind of rebellious adventurer whose lance is forever tilted at the status quo. Meanwhile the critic, who in the nature of his calling tends to be respectful of history, has often stood on very conservative ground with regard to change.

The result has been a protracted, fitful conflict in the classic mold between visionary and Pharisee.

Nowadays it is generally felt that the box score of the last 100 years decisively favors the artist.

Recall Injustice

People have become keenly aware of the injustices done such excellent painters as Manet, Van Gogh, Picasso (and, recently, someone like Dubuffet) by critics who could not size up their stature and who favored instead a whole flock of now forgotten mediocrities. Thus what might be considered a beautiful lesson has ostensibly been learned lately.

However, it has in fact been learned to the point of excess in reverse. No one is more gingerly conscious of historical critical blunders than the post-World War II critics, who have vowed pretty much as a group that they shall no longer be caught with their antennae down.

The Vanguard artist — the artist of change and revolt — has emerged a kind of ragamuffin hero nonetheless. And contemporary critics evidently fearful of posterity's scorn, have frequently decided to operate on an automatic pilot of praise for the vanguard; when in doubt, extol.

Thereby, they figure, they won't be accused of missing whatever quality there is in innovation, nor find themselves later abandoned by history in the cold wastes of their misused erudition.

Plugs Sympathy

One of the nation's most powerful critics recently declared that to judge contemporary painting properly, a critic must confront it with "interested sympathy," even though disinterestedness has historically been an essential attribute of a good critic.

Consequently many, if not most, important critics nowadays insist that the last 15 years are not just a refreshing phase in American art but a glorious one. They go further — its 24-karat glitter is not confined to a few artists, but radiates from many. Moreover, any observer who demurs from these foregoing judgments does so at the peril of being condemned as a muscle-headed reactionary.

But isn't this foolishness following on foolishness? There is nothing to choose between the inordinate conservatism of most critics 50 or 60 years ago and the inordinate liberalism that characterizes the majority of their present descendants.

ing on foolishness? There is nothing to choose between the inordinate conservatism of most critics 50 or 60 years ago and the inordinate liberalism that characterizes the majority of their present descendants.

Tyrant Fashion

Either outlook amounts to tyranny by fashion. The notion that a critic should be "on the artist's side" does neither the artist nor his art any service in the long run.

There are dozens of reasonably gifted artists in America now whose talents have languished in the permissive atmosphere of the critics' lotus land.

The principal tasks of an art critic are to judge and to explain the artist, not to be his handmaiden, proselyte, or publicist. If the artist's risk is in painting the picture, the critic's risk arises in assessing it. Both of them hope for the reward of rightness of intuition, and both should therefore be willing to be found wrong.

Play the Game

This critic, then, is game to make his conclusions about the contemporary scene and to live with the results. As far as post-war America is concerned, from this vantage point it looks like a lively period so far, but a good deal less than a heart-stopping one.

After Gorky, DeKooning, Pollock, Kline, and probably Rothko (five or six able men are about par for any average art phase), the roster begins to consist mostly of the bantamweights and the undeveloped. And it is important that the current crop of bantamweights be thus designated, despite the fact that so many of them are disguised by big shoulder pads which the critics have cheerfully issued them.

This is my considered judgment up to now, and it admittedly involves the critic's aforementioned risk. If posterity should agree with me, then the rightness of the intuitions I have firmly felt when admiring, let's say, DeKooning's "Excavation" at the Art Institute in Chicago will constitute an ultimate reward.

On the other hand, I may be wrong about him, or about some other artist who may later be thought to possess the genius I now find so utterly wanting in him. If the latter proves the case, it is my loss, and it can simply be filed under the heading: "Breaks of the Game."

Boy Burned in July Dies at Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Two-year-old Michael Sario died today of burns suffered July 19 when fumes from gasoline he had spilled on himself were ignited.

Brown Deer Fire Chief George Newman said the little boy, playing alone in the basement of his parents' home, had spilled gasoline on himself from a can and the fumes were ignited by the pilot light of a water heater. The child was burned over 50 per cent of his body.

Travelling Dutch Art Show Reveals Works, Life of the Great Rembrandt

This Self-Portrait Etching Shows Rembrandt age 33 at the height of his success. Reproductions of it and other prints, drawings and paintings will be shown at the Paine Art Center, Oshkosh, through Sept. 23.

OSHKOSH — The life and work of Rembrandt Harmens van Rijn (1606-1669) will be shown at the Paine Art Center in an exhibit opening today and running through Sept. 23. This educational exhibition, which tells about one of the best known artists of all times, comes to Oshkosh through the courtesy of the Netherlands Information Service. It was organized and assembled in Holland under the supervision of the Ministry of Education, Arts and Sciences in The Hague.

The display consists of over 150 illustrations, reproductions of works of art, and documents, plus explanatory text.

Along with this interesting presentation is a selection of 50 etching and drawing copies by Rembrandt. The originals of these small works are mostly found in the Print Room of the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam. These, also, are on loan from the Netherlands Information Service and are hung in the Art Center's North Gallery.

Rembrandt's Life

Rembrandt was born in Leyden, the Netherlands, 356 years ago, at the time when Holland became an independent nation. His father was a well-to-do miller, whom he painted some 11 times. His early training as an artist was mostly under the direction of his father, a portrait painter.

Around 1632 the artist moved to Amsterdam to become a professional portrait painter.

With the picture "Anatomy Lesson of Dr. Tulp," illustrated in the Art Center's show, his name was made and he prospered.

After 1642 Rembrandt's Dutch reputation declined, possibly because of the now famous masterpiece "Night Watch" with its then unusual composition; his wealthy wife, Saskia, died and later he was forced into bankruptcy.

Biblical Subjects

From 1660 onwards he turned to painting Biblical subjects to landscapes and to studies of Jews. During his career he had painted many religious subjects, but the later works are deeper in emotional content and far less superficially dramatic.

During the '50s and '60s his portraits show a lasting psychological penetration—done mostly to please himself.

This great Dutch artist created about 650 paintings (of which some 60 are self-portraits) as well as about 300 etchings and between 1,500 and 2,000 drawings.

The name "Rembrandt" is a household word all over the world and to many is synonymous with the highest in man-made art.

The Art Center, with this exhibition, now goes back to its regular hours with the exception that in addition to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the galleries will now be open Sundays the year around.

Bergstrom Center Hangs Modern Art by Oldster

Retrospective Displays Change In Style of Artist Paul Burlin

BY JAY JOELYN

Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

NEENAH — This report of the Paul Burlin exhibit at the John Nelson Bergstrom Art Center must be less than impartial. Burlin is a very modern painter and modern paintings have a way of getting under the skin of the viewer and leave him completely incapable of unprejudiced judgment.

Modern art, like Scotch or olives, is an acquired taste. The initiate can't explain his taste to an uninitiated nor is the reverse possible.

The current Bergstrom show has this saving grace, however. It is a retrospective of some 26 years in the artistic life of the 76-year-old modernist and gives the viewer—initiated or uninitiated—a chance to see his progression—or fall—toward his present state.

Well Known

Since 1913 when, at 27, he received his first major recognition under the aegis of William Glackens, Burlin has stood at or near the forefront of American painters. Less than a decade ago Burlin started experimenting with modern expression.

His most recent examples in the show are the achievement of his search "for certitude, for self-realization in the immediate process of creation, in the powerfully felt esthetic experience—the fusion of subliminal impulses and conscious action," according to the art author and critic Irving Sandler, who helped select the 27 oils and five drawings on display.

Sandler's explanation is as edifying as Burlin's oils.

The Bergstrom show does demonstrate the possibility of liking both Burlin's early works and his septuagenarian visions of artistic youth.

Jaffe Choices

There are two paintings in the show chosen by no less a personage than Dr. Ben Casey's TV sidekick and one of the real intelligensia of the stage, Sam Jaffe.

One is quiet, swirling oil of a tree, called "Landscape," painted the forefront of American painters. Less than a decade ago Burlin started experimenting with modern expression.

Jaffe Choices

There are two paintings in the show chosen by no less a personage than Dr. Ben Casey's TV sidekick and one of the real intelligensia of the stage, Sam Jaffe.

One is quiet, swirling oil of a tree, called "Landscape," painted ed in 1930. The other is a huge canvas, vibrating with color but without any discernable design or purpose, created as "the fusion of subliminal impulses and conscious action" in 1959 and called "Red-Red not the Same."

A key to the purpose of such modern art may be derived from the fact "Landscape" was loaned to the American Federation of Arts for the traveling exhibit from Jaffe's private collection. "Red-Red etc." was a gift to Whitney Museum of American Art by Jaffe, Milton Lowenthal, Harry Pinkerson, Bernard Rejs and Dr. Samuel E. Sussman.

Disadvantage

Perhaps the confined quarters of the show at the Bergstrom Center places Burlin's oils at a disadvantage. The canvasses are so large and the color so pure that there is an actual physical pressure built up in the small cubicles.

Color, apparently right out of the tube, is not only a major part of the huge canvasses, it is the very essence of the work.

Sandler in the brochure that accompanies the show explains, "The rejection of pre-determined ideas about art and life has compelled Burlin to begin at the beginning, to reexamine the elemental motives of painting. Like many of his contemporaries, he has sought for certitude, for self-realization in the immediate process of creation."

Surprising Work

Perhaps the most surprising work in the exhibit is a small colored drawing purporting to be a study for one of the large oils. Although the oil fails to follow the study slavishly, it does make the point that the oils are more than they seem. The masses, slashes, dribble and blotches of color apparently have been planned.

One of the color masses, "The White Rose Upright," painted and named after presumably a great deal of effort in 1957, was awarded one of the three first prizes in the ART USA exhibition in 1960.

On the other end of the time and visual scale is the "Portrait of America" first prize winner of 1945. It is a 1939 painting of a crowded soda fountain. It, Jaffe's "Landscape" and, especially, "Ghost City" are well designed, though drably colored, and understandable paintings.

Distorted License

In the '40s Burlin started superimposing a distorting license on his representational work. As he moved away from the realistic his palette gained brightness.

The place of honor at the center is occupied by a painting owned by Carleton College, "Tiger, Tiger Burning Bright." It is a grotesque combination of fairly drawn figures being devoured by a distorted tiger sporting a row of stars above his head.

There are several examples of this distortion, nightmare period that preceded the color masses. Although the figures and symbols are recognizable, the meaning—the communication — from the painter is unclear.

Unclear Meaning

"Homage to Vaudeville" is an unentertaining looking fellow who appears to be eating something. "Man Alone With His Face" is a fellow hanging on to a panel-less door while a scarf or snake around his neck has squeezed his head into a triangular shape.

Standing before these works that will hang at the Bergstrom until Sept. 16, this viewer received a feeling of inadequacy, an inability to find any kinship with other viewers who have found significance and, even, beauty in Burlin's oils.

In another story on this page Franz Schulze of the Chicago Daily News Service has words of encouragement to salve this feeling.

You Ask Question, You'll Get Answer

LEON, Spain (AP)—Raul Ginzto, 18, had a ready answer when police asked him why he had stolen a motorcycle.

Ginzto said he took the hike to return to the Leon Municipal Jail from which he escaped Friday to attend the annual fiesta in his native village nearby.

Ginzto had been jailed for stealing a motorcycle.

New York With 57 of His Best Paintings

He sold them all and they now hang in galleries and private homes from New York to Washington, from Chicago to Miami.

Buoyed by this financial coup, Bouts again retreated to the Swan and seldom comes ashore.

Down in the hold, where heavy cargo was once stored, Bouts has his studio. Sunlight streams across his canvasses and working table, often muted by a curtain of transparent cloth stretched across open hatch. Bouts delights in his mastery of a style of painting long abandoned; seldom seen, in fact, since the Renaissance days of the old Italian masters.

This technique involves the use of leaves of gold and copper, so delicate that a whisper of wind or breath can turn the leaves into gold dust. Bouts over the years has learned to paint with these leaves as a base, imbuing his finished works with a richness uncommon in modern art.

Political Students May Find Lack of Insight Into Recent Developments in New State History

A SHORT HISTORY OF WISCONSIN, by Larry Gara, State Historical Society of Wisconsin, 288 pages, $4.00.

The Wisconsin State Historical Society's impressive shelf of book-length Wisconsin historical studies has been enlarged with the publication of a new short history of Wisconsin, recreating the life of this state during three centuries.

Larry Gara, a young history teacher who won his doctorate at the University of Wisconsin and is now teaching in a small college in Pennsylvania, is the author of the compact, usefully illustrated volume that grew out of the demands for a brief text for use in the University Extension Division's correspondence course in state history.

It is not a simple task to compress the varied texture of Wisconsin's background into a short volume, providing also the comprehensive lists of collateral readings, statistical and other inserts, and the photographic reproductions that Prof. Gara offers.

Some Flaws

As a schoolroom introduction to the history of our community, the study is an adequate one. For ten by an academic historian, the more sophisticated readers and especially those with an appreciation of the complex and unique political history of the state, Gara's story probably has serious shortcomings. Frequently he betrays not only his own unfamiliarity with state affairs, especially in recent decades, and the fact that he has borrowed uncritically from sources that more experienced historians would use sparingly — such as the campaign tracts of some of the political Wisconsin leaders of this recent period was the late Joseph P. McCarthy, the man who did as much as any man to break the power of the LaFollette Progressive movement.

Gara here takes the prudent course. He says virtually nothing about the origin and rise of the most controversial figure in American politics in the 1950s, and he is evidently too far from the heart of the matter to risk the offense of those who supported him enthusiastically or those who fought him with unparalleled vigor. Surely the most fascinating of the Wisconsin leaders of this re-

But while we can remember—while it still is fresh and green,
Let's spend another minute with a happy summer scene.*

As it splashes on your face . . .
What sport to ride a sea horse
And give the dragon chase . . .
And spread ice cream and chocolate
On clothes and every place . . .
And snuggle warm and cuddly
After swimming in a race . . .
And eat sweet cotton candy —

The Inside Story Family Recreation Requires Planning

BY KATHLEEN WALSH
Outagamie County Home Agent

This past week I was attending the biannual Wisconsin Recreation Leaders' Laboratory, at Camp Susan near Antigo. At this workshop members spent the week receiving training and actual experiences in organizing and carrying out recreation activities in their communities.

I should like to explain a bit about the program and also the value of recreation in the home as well as in the community.

The first recreation laboratory was held in 1938 when a group got together to share ideas, experiences and skills that they might take back to their communities. During the years this program has continued to grow.

During the week at the workshop, members participated in art and craft activities, in nature studies, in musical activities such as: song leadership, social games and folk square dancing.

Recreation is Important

Why is recreation so important? It has many educational values and it also serves as a means of releasing energy. It is a worthwhile way of using your leisure time. It helps develop character.

We become so absorbed in our work or in the process of business of bringing up families that much fun is missed. Many families never or very seldom play together. Many parents have almost forgotten how to play. For some it probably has been a long time since they have played and they are almost afraid to start again.

Perhaps for some of you, games and playing are only for parties and not thought of as a part of daily living. Actually, games and family recreation are great help in adding fun, gaiety and in developing a feeling of closer understanding and companionship between all members of the family.

Everyone Can Play

Everybody in the family can play games together. Even the youngest, although he can't play become good sports as they see the game, can help by drawing others who are good sports about a card or moving a player. I think losing. You can help this situation by developing the attitude at home by not letting them win the ordinary loss too many games in succession as one place for fun; but, do not make this too and family recreation. For in the incident by not making the games stance, washing dishes can be a too hard or by not making too time for group singing, for stories, many rules.

Meal time can be rich with laughter and funny stories or descriptions of interesting happenings of the day.

Family fun doesn't necessarily playing games. There are many other ways of having family fun. Some of these would be reading good books together. Of course, you have to consider the age of the youngsters. Singing or playing musical instruments together, selecting and listening to especially interesting radio and television programs, celebrating birthdays and other special days among the family or simply popping pop corn and making candy together are family fun activities.

Hobbies Provide Fun

Having family hobbies such as collecting and making items such as airplanes, handcraft items or sharing photography, nature studies and innumerable number of possibilities along this line are other means of recreation.

If you run out of ideas for family fun activities, you will find that many magazines contain ideas and games and activities. The Parents' Magazine has a luncheon at the clubhouse. # What Does Real Estate Man Buy for Own Home?

BY ALBERT JEDLICKA, JR.
Chicago Daily News Service

Let's go with a real estate sales manager when he buys his own house.

What does he settle for in the way of location, construction, design and price?

Does he follow his own advice to other home buyers?

Buying a home of his own is old hat to Frank M. Kaye, of the Irving V. Reznay realty firm in suburban Brookfield, Ill. He has bought these for himself in recent years.

"I've used a house as a savings account to build up equity," he explains.

"To start, a family should take the best house they can get for their money, then use it as a stepping stone to something better."

In buying his new home in a subdivision, Kaye started by sizing up the community.

Potential Growth
"I sought an area of potential growth, with possibilities for a future increase in value of the home if I ever decide to sell," he notes.

"We're close to a park, swimming pool and ski and fishing lodge, so I don't have to travel for hours for recreation."

"The home also has a large lot, which is important today with the trend to outdoor living, with I use one for the den.

adults as playminded as the children.

"I like the idea of buying a home with all improvements—paved streets, sewers and water—installed. Installation of these facilities at a later date could be more costly than if originally put in."

Space Vital
"Spaciousness is important, particularly in bedrooms sized to accommodate twin beds. "I liked the traffic pattern of the house. There's a hallway off the entrance which provides access to various points in the home without passage through other rooms. The perspective in our home is good, too. You can sit down in a room without looking into a bathroom."

"The kitchen is built with an island sink that's convenient for cooking and keeping clean. We have a dining area in the kitchen. "In our last home, we didn't build such a dining area because we wanted to hold down costs."

"There are little features that strike you such as the coach lights in the bathroom which carry out the colonial theme."

Did you make any basic changes in the builder's plans?

"No, except to add a two-car garage to fit our needs."

Did you check into the real estate taxes?

"This is sometimes a danger point. Taxes may be underestimated and the people will go over their heads in payments. Then you may see the 'For Sale' sign pop up."

"A good way to get straightened out on this point is to go personally to the county assessor's office and get an idea of what your taxes will run. We're under no delusion. Our taxes will run from around $490 or up. But I'm satisfied that the taxes aren't out of line in relation to value."

Did you buy right off?

"No. I went back three times and took Momma along the fourth time for her stamp of approval. Then we decided to wait another two weeks to see if we still wanted to buy."

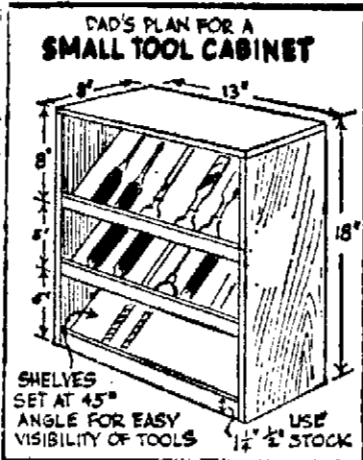

"There's an enduring glamor in the Colonial lines," says Kaye. "You can see the trend toward acceptance of the 'Williamsburg look.' It is even evident in the design of such commercial developments as shopping centers."

What about the styling of the interior?

"A home should be adaptable to a family's needs. In our case,

Aged to Get Attention Of U. S. Public Housing

BY J. W. DAVIS
AP Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some old people can't take tub baths. They are too feeble or crippled to climb over the side.

What they need is a walk-in shower with a built-in, substantial seat.

Arthritic hands sometimes can't turn a wash basin faucet. But they can still press a lever. So, it would be better to put levers on the fixtures.

These problems and solutions are just two small things out of dozens that the Public Housing Administration has learned in providing low-rent housing for the elderly.

25 Years Old

The public housing commissioner, Marie C. McGuire, talked especially about housing for old people Saturday as her agency celebrated its 25th anniversary. It was Sept. 1, 1937 that President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the basic legislation.

In the 25 years since then approximately seven million men, women and children have been provided with subsidized, low-rent housing under the program.

There are now more than 515,000 public housing units, occupied by about two million persons. Another 430,000 tenants will be moving into 160,000 new dwelling units now to be added to the program.

Elderly Tenants

Nearly half of the scheduled homes are to be designed especially for use by elderly men and women of low income, a rapidly growing part of the population.

In addition to planning special conveniences for old people, Mrs. McGuire has a dream of making public housing buildings far more attractive than they have been in the past.

"There is no need to limit them to something that is just cheap and waterproof," she told a reporter. "People who live in concrete barracks will react to concrete barracks."

"It won't cost any more money to get attractive, imaginative designs."

"I want it to be happiness housing."

Texas Background

Mrs. McGuire, a dynamic, brown-eyed, silver-haired woman, made a name for herself as a housing expert in Texas—San Antonio and Houston—before President Kennedy tapped her for the top FHA job April 25, 1961.

She feels she has made progress and has plans for more. What she has in mind for public housing in general—not just housing for the old—would have been considered revolutionary not long ago.

Roof garden swimming pools, bowling alleys, soft drink and sandwich bars for teen-agers, day nursery centers, youth training and employment centers and welfare services are among the innovations she envisions.

Such services, as she sees it, could be provided by other agencies, probably a municipal recreation department or similar organization working with local public housing authorities.

Improved Quality

In an anniversary statement, she said: "This local-federal program has done much to improve the quality of our national housing inventory over its first 25 years, but there is still a tremendous existing need which must be met."

"As President Kennedy pointed out in his housing message to Congress early in 1961, . . . 14 million American families . . .

currently live in substandard or deteriorating homes!"

In the public housing program, the federal agency contributes plans and construction loans to community housing authorities.

These loans are later repaid with interest at the time the local housing authority finances its project through the sale of bonds. After also has a far-reaching effect on the homes are occupied, federal financial assistance is in the form of an annual subsidy to enable low rents to be charged.

Mixed Reaction

There has been much opposition, as well as much support, for public housing. The opposition is generally based on the feeling that it is wrong to take money from some people—taxpayers—and use it to help pay the rent for some other people.

Public housing is intended only for those who cannot pay the going rate of rents.

Check Home Before Buying

Look Into Materials, Equipment Included, Try Talk With Builder

If you are planning to buy a new home, you should find out as much as possible about the materials and equipment included. Discuss these details with the builder and compare operating costs of various fuels to make certain that the house heating and other appliances offer the best value in economy of operation. Your local gas company will be happy to assist you in making a comparison of costs.

Before the war, most homes in the United States were custom built. A family needing a new home contacted a builder, and arranged to have the house built.

Today, however, the picture has changed radically. Builders now erect homes, ranging anywhere from 25 to several thousand, on a tract of land and then advertise for buyers.

This requires a great deal of money. Builders, like families, must borrow the money from banks and lending institutions.

According to the American Gas Association which sponsors a Blue Star Home program, this new approach to home building has brought added protection to the family that eventually buys the house. Because, says A.G.A., both the home buyer and the lender want security of their investment.

Of some 25,000 lending institutions in the U.S., about 7,000 account for 80% per cent of all mortgages and construction loans.

The influence of government agencies such as FHA (the Federal Housing Authority) and the V.A. (Veteran's Administration) through the sale of bonds. After also has a far-reaching effect on the homes are occupied, federal financial assistance is in the form of an annual subsidy to enable low rents to be charged.

Last year, the FHA Administration sent a directive to all FHA field offices directing them to lower income requirements on more expensive homes provided the builder can demonstrate that it is wrong to take money from some people—taxpayers—and use it to help pay the rent for some other people.

Application of this principle also makes it possible for home buyers to carry longer mortgages without increasing monthly hous-

Original Ideas in Grouping Of Houses Being Explored

New ways of grouping houses advanced beyond the planning are being explored to permit more stage. The chief obstacles are reasonable population densities subdivision and zoning specifications based on the prevailing single-lot development concept.

Many zoning specifications leave no room for deviation or experimentation. However, there are increasing examples of planned unit developments having the advantage of an over-all concept, embracing a fairly large area. These developments contain a variety of housing and land-use types. But, again, many zoning ordinances have inadequate provision for this kind of residential development.

There are numerous patterns that the cluster arrangement can take, but the buildings are grouped on one part of the land and an open space is preserved, usually in the rear of the homes. This can include not only a patio or similar area for each house but an open space to provide all the homes in the cluster with a vista or a recreational area.

Such fresh approaches to residential land use are needed because of the mounting costs of land development and of the increase in per capita consumption of land.

Arrangements such as cluster zoning offer the potential advantages of preserving open space, reducing lot sizes, lowering costs and providing not only variety in design but also a better circulation pattern.

Further testing and application of this type of development are being carried forward by builders, planners, developers and architects.

However, relatively few have ing expenses, thus making more money available for other betterments.

Porch Swing Brings Old Folks Memories

A porch swing can make a hot day seem cooler — and also bring back fond memories for older folks. If you don't have a porch, look for another area where you can install a family swing. It's bound to be a hit with everyone.

A word of caution, however: The foot work needed to put the swing in motion will badly scuff or wear out most surfaces. The way to get around this is to surface the area under the swing with a durable material.

Gardens Boast Strange Effect

New York Project Features Fountains, Urns, Living Tapestry

As spring turned to summer, so did the fabric of the colorful living tapestry at Sterling Forest Gardens, a huge new development near Tuxedo, N.Y.

The Grand Tapestry, one of the many delightful gardens at Sterling, was inspired by old Aubusson and Millefleurs tapestries. Five fountains and a dozen eight-foot flower urns highlight the plantings of dwarf marigold and argemone amid tanbark paths and designs of yellow and blue marble and glass chips.

In the spring, the Tapestry garden, 340 feet long and 175 feet wide, featured blue and yellow pansies.

Masses of sweet alyssum, tuberous begonias, iris, geranium and coleus add brilliance in plantings surrounding the Persian carpet. In the spring there were myriads of tulips and other bulbs.

In the fall, marigolds, chrysanthemums, asters, dahlias, canas and primroses will add their warm hues.

Dining Room Can Double As Hideaway

Dividers, Decoration Transforms Part of Area Into Safe Haven

BY VIVIAN BROWN

The dining room need not be used only those few hours a day when the clan gathers for meals. The trend to room dividers makes it a dual-purpose possibility.

One reader suggests a corner of the dining room may be used by the homemaker as a little hideaway from the rest of the family.

"It's the first escape hatch I've found in my home," says the reader. "There is nothing to interest the children in it so even when they are at home, they leave me alone."

A rocker and ottoman are important to the scheme, says this informant, and a portable television is ideal for viewing when the little people are at the family set. If this idea is carried out, the dining room should be a cheerful spot papered or painted with relaxation in mind. Cool colors such as blue-green, lavender and gray are good paint choices for the room.

Many people prefer warm colors that are used ideally when combined with lighter hues, particularly white. You wouldn't choose a too-stimulating orange or red in a room planned for dining, but cheerful yellows, vivid blue, coral and even subdued reds may be combined with white to make a charming room. One accent should be light enough to relieve the dark effect. Wallpaper such as a patterned dark blue, red or yellow is a refreshing complement to white wainscoting.

A tranquil mural on one wall or wall panels can transform the dreariest room into a charming area. A shelf above a door or window can be used to pinpoint Staffordshire plates, pewter, a collection of pitchers, glass, copper lustre. Plants add to the cheerfulness of any area.

A low cabinet or screen may be the room divider that separates the area of relaxation from the rest of the room.

Three of the 55 Workers employed by the Schuette brothers, Wausau, pack insulation into a roof panel of one of the company's "manufactured homes." When this is done, the joists of the panel will be glued and wired and a piece of plywood will be placed on top of the joists. Then the panel will go to a huge press. Current will run through the wires and the glue will dry in 20 minutes. These panels and other components are manufactured on a production line basis.

Wausau Brothers Build Complete Homes in a Day

Create Components in Plant, Assemble Them Like Tot's Blocks

A home isn't built in a day, fans, sinks and fixtures for dish towels.

When you own one home and want to build another, you've got problems. You have to sell the home you own. And you have to wait some months before you can move into your new one.

That's not necessarily so. There is an outfit in Wausau who'll build you a home in a day. In two days you can move into a nearly completed home and live comfortably.

The firm, run by three Schuette brothers, builds homes like your child would build one out of blocks. It simply puts manufactured components side-by-side and on top of each other. It doesn't take long.

The homes are what the Schuette brothers call "manufactured homes," as opposed to the prefabricated "shell homes" that have been put up in the Fox Cities area.

Plumbing, Wiring In In other words, at their 35,000-square-foot plant at Wausau, they manufacture complete bathrooms, complete kitchens, complete bedrooms, family rooms and dining rooms.

When bathrooms come off the production line, the bath tub, toilet and sink are installed. The plumbing, wiring and heating ducts are in the walls. There is wallboard on the interior and the floor and tub area are ceramic-tiled. The same with the kitchen components, which have cupboards, finished floors, exhaust of rooms off the truck and lower them onto the foundation. Then the parts are connected, without hammers, nails, saws and sawdust. Pipes, wiring and heating ducts are tied together. By noon of the construction day, the exterior of the home is complete. But there's still about four hours to the site of the new home. The home buyer must provide the lot and a foundation. The brothers he has to do inside the home is lay carpeting, put up drapes and paint the walls to suit his taste.

A crane lifts the rooms or parts of rooms off the truck and lower them onto the foundation. Then the parts are connected, without hammers, nails, saws and sawdust. Pipes, wiring and heating ducts are tied together. By noon of the construction day, the exterior of the home is complete. But there's still about four hours to the site of the new home. The home buyer must provide the lot and a foundation. The brothers he has to do inside the home is lay carpeting, put up drapes and paint the walls to suit his taste.

This Is How the home looks at noon of a work day that begins at 8 a.m. The exterior is complete and workers are finishing up the interior. By the end of an 8-hour day the home will be finished, except for minor touches done on the second day. When the homeowner moves in he will only have to paint the walls, lay rugs and put up drapes.

A Crane Lifts a corner kitchen unit off the truck that carries the entire home. Workers guide the panel to its proper place. The whole process is much like the one a child uses with his building blocks. All homes are built on foundations provided by the homeowner. Buyers choose from any of ten plans or use the components to make their own custom plans.

The walls and ceilings are white when he moves in.

"Shell homes" are quite different. They don't go up as fast. The homeowner who buys one must plaster the walls, put in flooring and plumbing and, in some cases wiring, by himself. In many cases, there are no kitchen cabinets. There never are exhaust fans or fixtures or ceramic tile.

Offers Ten Plans The Schuette brothers who make theirs under the name of "Wausau Homes," think their operation is the only one of its type in the country. The corporate name is Housing Service Co.

The components are put together into ten house plans, varying in the space they offer from 864 to 2,448 square feet. They

Home Office Tax Deduction

Besides making work easier and faster, a home office often is tax deductible.

Businessmen with a part or full time office in the home can deduct the cost of the space, equipment and furnishings, in most cases. The home office must be used primarily for business purposes, of course, to qualify for a tax deduction.

Most home offices are located in the basement or attic because there is enough space for a desk, chair, filing cabinet and typewriter stand.

Lacquer Makes Brass Polishing Superfluous

Gleaming brass fireplace accessories add a bright touch to the decor, but what a chore it is to keep the brass polished.

Unless you get an emotional satisfaction out of this job, here's a simple way to eliminate it. Clean the andirons and fire tools and then spray them with a clear lacquer in an aerosol container, which will prevent them from tarnishing.

wires are run along the joints and electric current through the wires dries the glue rapidly. Strength of the panels is 200 pounds per square foot. The plywood bottom of the panel gives a finished ceiling in the basement. Wall panels are made the same way. All homes are nail-free.

Method Cuts Costs The production line operation in the $300,000 Wausau plant with 55 employees allows the company to buy materials in big quantities, to carry an inventory of new homes, and therefore to even out production and production costs through the year. The economies of the non-production line system allow the company to sell its homes about 10 per cent below the price of a conventional home.

Earl Schuette, the president, worked on his idea of prefabricated, complete homes in 1946, when he built homes in a construction Oshkosh customer lived with his mother and his mother-in-law. He de-The Schuettes built two small signed a three-point suspension apartments, slightly separated on trailer to move the homes without the ground floor, and superim-damaging them. And, while the posed a larger unit above and between them. He lives above and his mother and mother-in-law live in the separated ground units.

Above FHA Standards The brothers manufactured a motel to be put on the site of Camp Manitowish. The operator was in business three weeks after he ordered the motel.

All sections of the components, walls, and floors, are made up of plywood, sandwiched panels constructed on plans developed by the Forest Products Laboratory in problems in overcoming a "black mark" created by firms that sold Floor panels are 8 by 24 feet. They try to dispel it by having customers come to their Wausau plant and watch the homes being manufactured.

Art is a sound, serious business today. A good artist is no more of a "lightweight" than an airplane pilot is. Your son should guard against exploiting a flair which might be a passing fad. The sure thing is to specialize in some specific area of art.

A good example is the job of the medical artist. By zeroing in on this highly specialized form of art, a person can build a reputation and job stability.

A portrait artist, John Doe, concentrates on painting executives. After more than 35 years of painting top men in industry, he has developed a work ethic that even a printer would envy. If your son enjoys art and ability, give him an opportunity to exploit his talents. One of the most successful financiers I know started out in business as an artist. Ambition seeks its own level.

While most of the membership's businesses are flourishing in this expanding area, I am making profits. As a matter of fact, getting close to break-even or low.

Is there some way the national chamber could help me to negotiate new strategy and save my sinking business? I'd have as much direct, but didn't like to tip my hand.

DEAR CY:

My son is thinking of a career in art. I must say, he is talented. But, it has always seemed a lightweight occupation! I want him to have a secure, real life. Do you think we should discourage him in this

MRS.

DEAR MRS. ARO:

Art is a sound, serious business today. A good artist is no more a "lightweight" than an airplane pilot is. Your son should guard against exploiting a flair which might be a passing fad. The sure thing is to specialize in some specific area of art.

A good example is the job of the medical artist. By zeroing in on this highly specialized form of art, a person can build a reputation and job stability.

A portrait artist, John Doctor, concentrates on painting executives. After more than 35 years of painting top men in industry, he has developed a work ethic that even a printer would envy.

If your son enjoys art, and has ability, give him an opportunity to exploit his talents. One of the most successful financiers I know started out in business as an artist. Ambition seeks its own level.

DEAR CY:

For the past four years, I have been either the president or one of the officers of our local chamber of commerce.

While most of the member businesses are flourishing in this expanding area, I am making profits. As a matter of fact, getting close to break-even or low.

Is there some way the national chamber could help me to develop new strategy and save my sinking business? I'd have asked them direct, but didn't like to tip my hand.

HAXT

DEAR HAXTER:

Years ago, a jeweler friend told me mine was having business difficulties.

One day, he drove to a district where there was a successful jeweler. Upon introducing himself, he offered to pay the successful man a fee for straightening out his business. A deal was made and results proved excellent.

Follow suit. Talk to someone who is in your line of business, one who really knows how to make that cash register sing.

In this instance, appealing to the national chamber would be unnecessary.

Art is a sound, serious business today. A good artist is no more of a "lightweight" than an airplane pilot is. Your son should guard against exploiting a flair which might be a passing fad. The smart thing is to specialize in some specific area of art.

A good example is the job of the medical artist. By zeroing in on this highly specialized form of art, a person can build a reputation and job stability.

A portrait artist, John Doe, concentrates on painting executives. After more than 35 years of painting top men in industry, he has developed a work ethic that even a printer would envy. If your son enjoys art, and ability, give him an opportunity to exploit his talents. One of the most successful financiers I know started out in business as an artist. Ambition seeks its own level.

wonderful

What a year! Victoria's Golden Jubilee. The high tide of the British Empire. 1887 was a year of peace and prosperity and optimism, in America as well as in England. It was exactly the right year to start a business. And that's exactly what Henry C. Prange, our founder, did just 75 years ago this month. He was a farm boy. But he was wild to become a storekeeper. The little country store that he opened on the corner of 8th and Wisconsin in Sheboygan had a swift Horatio-Algerish success. In 1894, a profile in The History of Sheboygan County reported: "Henry C. Prange has a fine double store for dry goods ...a second floor for carpets and cloaks...and in the rear an extensive grocery. He is doing a large and increasing business, probably having the most important mercantile house in Sheboygan County. His success has been brilliant, and goes to show what may be accomplished by one who has a natural gift for business and devotes his whole energy and thought to it." What was America like? Grover Cleveland was President. Eugene Field had just written "Little Boy Blue". Lillian Russell, singing "The Girl With the Glass Eye", was the toast of Broadway. France had just presented us with the Statue of Liberty. Carrie Nation was wielding her hatchet. And Prange's little new store was selling everything it could get its hands on—stereopticon viewers, sheet iron stoves that glowed red in the parlor, hair crimpers, grape seeders, ladies fine knit mesh drawers, liquid corn plasters, and a phonograph record of "Uncle Josh in a Chinese Laundry". We said Prange's was "selling" this merchandise. We could have said "underselling". Because back in 1887 the Prange policy was the same as it is today—to keep Prange prices as low or lower than elsewhere in our areas. Isn't that what you want?

To celebrate our Diamond Jubilee, our Barbershop Quartet will render songs from each wonderful year Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia", "Pop Goes the Weasel", "Swanee River", "The Old Folks at Home", "Where Did You Get That Hat", "Rock-a-Bye Baby". And many, many more. Come on in. You're invited.

Arthur A. E. Mueller Has Been Guiding Hand of Airline

Board Chairman Bought Control
In 1952, Masterminded Most Of Firm's Phenomenal Growth

WAUSAU — The man who founded and has been the guiding hand in the sometimes amazing development of North Central Airlines anticipates the firm will convert from piston engines to pure jets within five years.

And Arthur A. E. Mueller believes North Central will continue to hold the "lead position" when anticipated mergers reduce the number of "feeder" lines from the existing 13 to six or seven.

Mueller, interviewed in his office in Wausau, his home town, reviewed the past, present and future of this airline that in 1961 flew over 168 million passenger miles, an increase of 86 times over its initial year of operation in 1948.

North Central today is first in number of passengers, first in number of pieces of mail carried, first in cargo hauled and first in number of miles flown, in the lineup of regional airlines, to pass its nearest competitor by some 40 per cent.

Fast Growth
North Central moved up from its humble beginnings in 1948 with a three-state route (then known as Wisconsin Central) to achieve a 1962 service area in 11 states, 91 cities and two Canadian provinces.

Arthur A. E. Mueller

Mueller purchased stock control of North Central in 1952. A man with no prior airline experience, he had however, a firm business foundation. He was experienced and successful as an investment broker, banker and in iron and steel foundries.

Mueller envisioned the great potential air transportation and in particular, local airlines, could play in the growth of the country. Here was a man who believed in the future of the industry to the tune of two million dollars — which was needed to put 55 per cent control to work on the decline and to furnish gravelly needed working capital. First he changed the line's name to North Central, envisioning the day the system would expand. He hired a new president. The man didn't work out. He hired another president and fired him a year later. In despair of finding the right man to do the immediate job at hand, he decided to operate the line himself. He spent the next six months putting in an arduous 90 hour week looking after his other business interests and running an airline.

Problems were rampant, first of which was a 30-day notice from the government that North Central must vacate its Madison headquarters to make way for an Army air base. He obtained space at World-Chamberlain Field in Minneapolis, where today North Central is still quartered.

2,000 Employees
The firm now has 2,000 employees, an impressive fleet of 33 DC-3's and 13 Convair 330-440's instead of the six DC planes and 200 employees of 1952.

After solving a veritable avalanche of immediate problems, Mueller began to search diligently for a new president to run the airline. He finally found H. N. (Hal) Carr, who in 1954, at 33, became the youngest airline president in the world. Carr soon demonstrated a genius for operational and managerial duties.

Under Mueller's direction, with Carr in the president's chair, North Central, in one of the most amazing recovery stories in the industry, was in the black in one month. Under the new regime, it showed a profit of $112,000 in the first year. Aviation circles were soon terming Mueller's and Carr's teamwork, the "greatest one-two punch in the industry."

North Central has always enjoyed enviable employee relations. In 1961, Carr received a citation and plaque from the pilot's union, AIPA, which praised North Central's excellent company - pilot working relationship. North Central has never experienced a strike.

In cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), Mueller and Carr built the line to the present network of 7,100 miles.

Reynolds Hits Republican's Fiscal Policy

Proposes Water Use Plan at Corn Roast
In Winneconne

WINNECONNE — John Reynolds, Democratic candidate for governor, lashed out at proposed Republican fiscal policies, the right-wing elements of the party, and proposed a 10-point program to preserve water resources in a talk Saturday afternoon at the Winnebago County Democratic party corn roast here.

Reynolds said Wisconsin would see a 3 per cent general sales tax if a Republican was elected governor. "The Republicans are trying to destroy the tax system based on the ability to pay," he charged.

He contended the fairest way to finance government was through a progressive income tax. Regardless of what type of tax is imposed, Reynolds said, the money raised comes from income.

"Both the sales tax and the property tax are regressive taxes. Purpose of the sales tax is to shift the tax burden from the rich to the poor."

Reynolds also charged that if the Republicans are elected the "fanatical right" would try to seize control of the state. "This issue transcends state lines," he said. "Members of the John Birch Society are dedicated to the destruction of democracy."

Reynolds said Richard Nixon and George Romney have had no difficulty repudiating the John Birch Society, but Philip Kuehn has been taken.

The preliminary over-all economic development plan, authorized by the Menominee County Board last May, has been completed and submitted to the Wisconsin Rural Area Development Committee, according to William Bennett, Menominee County agent.

Menominees Work For Equality

BY DAVE DUFFEY

KESHENA — The first step by Menominee County up the path toward economic and social equality with Wisconsin's other counties, aided by government funds, has been taken.

The preliminary over-all economic development plan, authorized by the Menominee County Board last May, has been completed and submitted to the Wisconsin Rural Area Development Committee, according to William Bennett, Menominee County agent.

This report, prepared by a local committee of 14, in very broad terms, outlines the needs of the nation's only all-Indian county. Recognition of these suggestions by the Wisconsin RADC and clearance by the State Department of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg appeared to Congress in a Labor Day statement Saturday to pass could result in release of funds a battery of pending measures by the federal government under that would "improve individual the Area Redevelopment Act, security, increase jobs and speed up economic growth."

"It is important," Goldberg said, "that we maintain in the depressed area in May 1961 and United States an economy that eligible for federal money to re-seeks constantly to fulfill its potential since the aspiration for freedom in the world relies upon our capacity to grow and develop."

The secretary, who has been named to the Supreme Court, found much cause for satisfaction in the economy's performance and services production at an all-time high rate of $522 billion a year; almost 70 million at work with the highest average incomes in history; personal income of all Americans at record levels.

perhaps 600 outside the county, are starting from scratch.

The switch from direct supervision and assistance by the federal government to reliance on their own ingenuity, resources and ambition has found the Menominee severely handicapped. It's one large asset was its huge timbered recreational area, the largest stand of mature quality timber in the Great Lakes states. Natural assets are of little use without development. The long-time dependence on the federal government had not nurtured management potential, capital, property and individual responsibility and initiative. Added to that is the reluctance of some Menominees to give up the "old ways" and inter-tribal disputes and questions over who should be enrolled members of the Menominee tribe.

Myriad List

This helps explain the myriad list of "problems and needs" listed for the area by the county committee. They include need for establishment of tourist facilities, development of tourist attractions, summer and winter recreation; preservation of wilderness areas; development of wood using industries utilizing the forest products; expansion of present lumber industry and attraction of new industry; discovery of a use for abundant water resources.

Listed as lacking or in short supply in Menominee County are banking services, entrepreneur capital, small business, medical facilities, education, mechanical trades, management and supervisory talent, a community news-

Appleton police received a complaint from a woman saying that a fast-talking magazine salesman had persuaded her to sign a contract ordering magazines. When she read the contract she found out that she had signed up to buy $210 worth of subscriptions—$3.50 a month for 60 months.

The woman claimed the salesman had misrepresented the number of magazines and the amount she would pay.

Life Guard Saves Boy Knocked Out After Swimming Pool Dive

BURLINGTON (AP) — A life guard applied mouth - to - mouth resuscitation when a freight train delayed a rescue squad and was credited Saturday with saving the life of a five-year-old boy knocked out by a belly flop dive into a swimming pool.

The boy, Patrick Carlson of Cincinnati, Ohio, had been pulled from the motel pool by his father, Robert, who dived fully clothed into the water. The youngster had stopped breathing shortly before the life guard, 18-year-old Greg Nelson of Burlington, began applying mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Meanwhile, the Burlington rescue squad, en route to the motel, was delayed at a crossing by a long freight train.

Employees Won't Cross Picket Line

BY HAROLD KURTZ
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Labor Day is usually regarded as the end of the vacation season. But many workers in the Fox Cities face a possible vacation after Labor Day—and they aren't looking forward to it.

The reason? The telegraphers' strike on the Chicago and North Western Railway could cause all sorts of repercussions in the area.

First, there's the railroad itself. Although telegraphers number less than 10 per cent of the total work force, employees have refused to cross telegrapher picket lines. Result? The entire railroad operation is closed down.

30 Laid Off

Already one firm (Borden's at New London) has laid off 30 workers because railroad cars weren't available to haul the finished product away.

Hardest hit in the Fox Cities will be the paper industry. The Thilmann Pulp and Paper Co., Kaukauna, and the Kimberly-Clark mill at Kimberly might be forced to shut down if the strike continues. The two plants employ close to 3,000 workers.

Both plants are served only by the North Western. Some shipping is being done by truck, but company officials point out that this isn't adequate.

10-12 Carloads

Thilmann normally ships 10 to 12 carloads a day of finished paper. By trucking to other rail lines, the firm was able to get out two cars the first day of the strike.

Another complication is a potential shortage of boxcars.

"There's no shortage of boxcars — yet," an employee of another rail line said. But he added he didn't know how long this would last.

Last week the Wisconsin State Employment Service reported that employment in the Appleton area was 13,341. This situation could change overnight if hundreds are laid off because of the strike.

File for Compensation

The Unemployment Compensation division reported Friday that workers laid off because of the strike would be eligible for unemployment compensation. The office advised any employees laid off to file for compensation immediately. Maximum benefits are $51 a week.

The strike began Thursday morning when members of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers (ORT) walked off their jobs. The union is concerned with the steady elimination of jobs.

They are asking a freeze on job elimination. The company has announced that it will go along with a Presidential fact-finding commission recommendation which has proposed eliminating more jobs.

Business Increase

The railroad has about 1,000 telegraphers with 125 in the Lake Shore Division which includes the entire Fox Cities area.

Meanwhile, the Soo Line and Milwaukee Road — the two other rail lines serving the area — report a big increase in business. Boxcars were lined up at both stations in Appleton as manufacturers worked to get their products to market.

Here's a random rundown on the situation in the Fox Cities area.

Damages Near $45,000 in Barn Fires

Two Buildings, 200 Tons of Hay Burned On Luxemburg Farm

Post-Crescent News Service
LUXEMBURG — Fire, which caused an estimated $45,000 in damages, destroyed two barns, cattle, machinery and silos on the Norbert Dorner farm, route 1, Luxemburg, Saturday afternoon.

Destroyed in the blaze were two barns, one with a full basement and a 40 by 60 shed used as a barn and machine shed, which had a half basement. Also destroyed was the milkhouse attached to the big barn.

Nine heifers, nearly 200 tons of hay, two elevators and two silos were also lost.

The Dorner farm is located three miles southwest of Luxemburg on Kewaunee County Trunk N.

Jerry Retzlaff, who was drilling a well just south of the big barn, smelled smoke. He checked his drilling machine and finding nothing wrong went around the building and noticed the small shed on fire. He notified Dorner. About the same time Kathy Dorner, 14-year-old daughter of the Dorners, came running in the house and told her mother, who immediately called the Luxemburg Fire Department. According to the firemen, when they arrived both barns were in flames.

Dorner said both barns were built about 1900. A strong south wind helped save a nearby dairy and the house.

The loss, estimated at $45,000, was partially covered by insurance. The cause of the fire was not determined.

Personnel Group Plans Meeting At Conway Hotel

The 23rd annual meeting of the Wisconsin Chapter of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security will be held Friday at the Conway Hotel. Registration is scheduled at 9 a.m. in the Lake Superior Room. Welcoming members at 10 a.m. will be IAPES President John Gruisch, Fred R. Gehrke, home office manager and Mayor Clarence Mitchell.

The paper industry in Wisconsin will be discussed at the morning session by Thomas Branagan and David Dean of the Wisconsin Paper Industry Information Service.

Members will tour the Elm Tree Bakery at 1:45 p.m. and the Institute of Paper Chemistry and the Appleton Coated Paper Co. at 2:30 p.m.

A banquet will be held in the Conway Crystal Room at 6:30 p.m. and the "Kimberlaire" will entertain at 7:30 p.m.

Marotz Planning Talk Wednesday At Hotel Conway

Robert G. Marotz will be in Appleton to speak at a luncheon meeting Wednesday noon at the Conway Hotel. Marotz is a Republican candidate for attorney general.

Marotz, now of Madison, is a former Shawano County assemblyman. He was endorsed by the Republican state convention but faces primary opposition from George Thompson, LaCrosse.

Reservations for the luncheon can be made by contacting Pat Coughlin before Tuesday noon. The meeting is open to the public, Coughlin said.

St. Pius X Church To Celebrate Feast of Patron Saint Monday

The congregation of St. Pius X Church, Appleton, will celebrate the feast of the parish's patron saint with a solemn high mass at 8 a.m. Monday.

The Rev. Richard Keller, pastor of the parish, will be celebrant. The Rev. John Van Buren will be deacon and deliver the sermon, and the Rev. John Feeney, St. Therese Catholic Church, will serve as sub-deacon.

The parish begins its annual 40 hours devotion at 8 a.m. Tuesday. Closing services will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday; the Rev. James Geenen, St. Patrick's Church, Stiles, will deliver the sermon.

Adoration services will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday with Father Geenen officiating. Other services during the 40 hours devotion are planned for build, a crew cut, and an air 8 a.m. Wednesday and Thursday.

North Central today operates from Cleveland to Minot, N.D., and from Omaha to Regina, Saskatchewan.

In 1961 North Central carried 1,085,094 passengers (in 1952 when Mueller took control it carried 153,047 persons); in 1961 it carried 6,444,012 pieces of mail (in 1952—1,172,620); it flew 15,970,289 pounds of cargo (in 1952—1,762,488).

North Central also has the distinction of being the only local to reach the milestone of boarding more than a million passengers a year. The line makes nearly 600 landings and takeoffs a day through its system.

Many Duties

North Central now takes about 60 per cent of Mueller's work week time—and much of his so-called free time on weekends.

Although Carr handles all operational details, Mueller is in daily telephone contact with him on policy matters. Mueller's duties include financing, route expansion, political contacts and stockholder relations.

Mueller is actually in the company's principal Minneapolis office only two or three times a month (he doesn't even wish a desk assigned to him). When not traveling, he does most of his paper work and engages in some 50 or more telephone calls a day, at his Wausau office.

A tall man with an athlete's build, a crew cut, and an air of intense confidence, Mueller travels the country over during his 6-day work week.

Other Interests

Mueller has interests in a bank, a realty company, several foundries and metal working plants, an insurance company and diverse smaller investments. In all his businesses, Mueller says he is "extremely fortunate to have top men in key positions."

Mueller graduated from Lawrence College, where he took a four-year business course. He won a scholarship at Cornell University and was there awarded a Master of Arts degree in business administration.

At Lawrence, he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year and was an outstanding athlete, in basketball, track, field, hockey and cross-country.

He held various student offices such as class president, fraternity president and editor of the college annual and president of the student body. He was also a competitive position in the industry as captain of the Lawrence debating team, oratory champion of the college and other segments to North Central routes, and acquisition of

Plan No Prescriptions For Headache Remedy

WASHINGTON (AP)—The acting medical director of the Food and Drug Administration said Saturday "there is no talk among knowledgeable people" about putting the headache remedy ingredient phenacetin on prescription or ordering its withdrawal from the market.

The official, Dr. Howard I. Weinstein, stressed that phenacetin, when taken in normal dosages for minor complaints, is considered completely safe. It is when remedies containing phenacetin are used for long periods of time—"months or years"—and in extremely excessive dosages for ailments such as arthritis and rheumatism without the advice of physicians that there is cause for concern, Weinstein said in an interview.

loyal people have given their time, effort and money, and most of all because they have believed, with me, it could be done," Mueller says.

Mueller sees a bright future for the North Central because of a "built-in" growth factor, the best of the Lawrence debating team, oratory champion of the college and other segments to North Central routes, and acquisition of

German Family Visits Near Hortonville

Walking Doll From Grossmutter To Make Trans-Atlantic Jet Flight

HORTONVILLE — A big walking doll, a gift from grossmutter, will make a trans-Atlantic flight by jet late this week.

The doll belongs to Claudia Klein, 5½, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Klein, Imhausen, Germany, who are nearing the end of a six-week visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Polenz, route 1, Hortonville.

Klein is a half-brother of Mrs. Polenz. Mrs. August Kramer, mother of Mrs. Polenz and Klein, lives with her husband at the Polenz home.

This year promises to be a big one in the Polenz family. They, and the Kramers also came from Germany, arriving in the U. S. on Feb. 14, 1957. Mr. and Mrs. Polenz have passed their examination and will become American citizens in November.

Impressed With Trip
The Kleins were quite impressed with their trip. They boarded a Boeing 707 jetliner in Frankfurt at 2:30 p.m. July 26. At 6 p.m. that evening (Central Daylight Time) they landed at O'Hare Field, Chicago, after an eight-hour non-stop flight. Less than 3½ hours later they were met by the Polenz family as they left a North Central plane at Oshkosh.

The flight from Germany took them over England, Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and Canada. German, of course, is the principal language around the Polenz home these days. The Kleins' English is confined pretty much to what they have learned since their arrival a few weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Polenz can handle the language well and the Polenz children, Betty and Ervin, seem to do all right in either tongue.

The Polenz family came to America through the assistance of a Lutheran welfare organization and settled on a farm near Athelstane (Marquette County), owned by the father of Fred Froehlich, Appleton city attorney. Later in 1957 they purchased the farm near Hortonville.

In German Army
Both Polenz and Klein served with the German Army during World War II. Both served in Norway, Klein in the equivalent of the American Army signal corps and Polenz as an infantry engineer and called Menasha police. A check revealed the driver lived in Neenah. Neenah police were notified and they picked up the man at his house before 6:20 p.m. No just before he was sent to Nor-mann Funeral Home will be charged were placed immediately.

Woman Found Dead at Home

Coroner Kamps Rules Mrs. Klapper's Death Apparently Suicide

The death of Mrs. Frank Klapper, by "asphyxiation due to drowning or strangulation" was called an apparent suicide by County Coroner Bernard Kamps Saturday.

Mrs. Klapper was found by her husband and son face down in the partially water-filled bathtub of their home at 1136 E. Glendale Ave., about 11:15 a.m. Saturday. The cord from an electric shaver was wrapped around her throat.

The Appleton Fire Department made a futile attempt at reviving her through artificial respiration before she was pronounced dead. Kamps said the 52-year-old woman had been depressed and ill health for several years and that she was under the care of her doctor.

The Appleton police assisted Kamps in his investigation.

Made Breakfast

Kamps reported that Mrs. Klapper made breakfast for her husband, their daughter, Sharon, 21, and son Jeffery 10, and that Klapper and the children left the house about 8:20 a.m.

Klapper told Kamps he took Sharon to work and Jeffery to a barbershop before returning home with Jeffery shortly after 11 a.m. Sally, 13, another daughter, told Kamps she was asleep in her bed until Jeffery awoke her and told her of her mother's death. She said she heard no strange sounds while she was alone in the house.

Mrs. Klapper was born Feb. 14, 1910, in Waupaca and had been an Appleton resident since 1940. Besides her husband and three children she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Mary Craig, and a sister, Mrs. Erma Thomack, both of Waupaca.

Funeral services at the Wich-view Lutheran Church, in charge, at 2 p.m. Wednesday with the Rev. al Park.

Get Physical Exams Before School Opens

Keeping Body Fit Helps Prepare for Mental Alertness

School bells are ringing this month all over the nation as America's youngsters begin the annual return to the classrooms. The last days before school opens are the time for making certain that the youngsters are ready physically for another nine months of learning.

The Appleton school system nurses office sends out letters to parents in the spring suggesting that physical exams be taken early to prepare children for the opening of school in the fall. The nurses office requests specifically that kindergarten, first and sixth grade youngsters see the family doctor for check-ups. Dental examinations are also highly recommended by the nurses.

The pre-registration physical examination is a must in all well regulated families and is even required in some school districts. Ask your doctor to look over the children before they report for classes, just to make certain that no ailments have cropped up during the summer that demand attention.

Ask your doctor to give your

Sportscar Rally Gains Popularity As Auto Hobby

A sportscar, a stopwatch, a clip board—and a destination.

That's all that's really necessary to enjoy the increasingly-popular sport of rallying, a Sunday afternoon pastime that spells fun and relaxation for thousands of American automotive hobbyists.

A few Sundays ago the Fox Valley Sports Car club set off on "The Rally That Really Counts."

Armed with full gas tanks, instructions and the knowledge that a picnic lunch was awaiting them, some 18 couples drove their sure-footed little vehicles along a prescribed route leading to the Joseph Eberle cottage at Wolf Lake.

'Simple Route'

Not everyone was able to follow the course that had been set up by Russ and Peg Spoor, Menasha. Spoor, who is club president, claimed it was "a simple route" designed to get everyone to the Eberle cottage in time for supper.

But some of the members good-naturedly disagreed with Spoor, after getting "lost" on the narrow, winding roads beyond Sherwood. Instead of trying to achieve perfect scores on a basis of time and distance, they consulted their maps and headed straight for the cottage, where they knew soft drinks and a hearty lunch would soon be ready for them.

Once at the cottage, the club members parked their cars in a colorful row on the lawn, then relaxed beside the lake. It was a time for socializing and for the inevitable discussions of the merits of their respective cars.

A general view of the picnic scene, photographed by James Auer, can be found on today's cover. A picture story, showing highlights of the rally itself, is published on pages 14 and 15 of this issue of VIEW.

Hospital Volunteer Worker Designated As 'Teen of Week'

BY HELEN TOLVERSEN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — Crisply uniformed in pinafores of gay pink and white stripes, teen-age candy strippers add notes of brightness and smiles of friendliness to Theda Clark Memorial Hospital during their summer program of volunteer service.

Newly initiated at Theda Clark, the candy stripper program include girls, all at least 16 years old, who serve a minimum of 30 hours during the summer. Mrs. E. Blenker, R.N., director of the candy strippers, noted that most of the 52 girls have already surpassed that requirement and "have shown terrific interest, have been extremely reliable and have taken adult responsibilities."

Miss Beverly Winkelman, 559 Fairview Ave., one of the teenage girls now sporting the peppermint stripes, became interested after hearing about the organizational meeting over her high school public address system. Beverly, who will be a sophomore at Neenah High in the fall, "thought it would be good experience, for I've always wanted to be a nurse."

Tours of Hospital

During the ten hours of orientation, encompassed in five sessions, Bev and the other girls were given tours of the hospital and briefed on their individual jobs. Mrs. Blenker expressed the prime objective of the program as "forming a link between the hospital and the community. The girls learn early what service to other people means."

When working at a desk in the lobby, Bev has a warm greeting for visitors and often serves as a capable guide, handy information center, and speedy mail sorter. When serving on the floors she checks menus, arranges and waters flowers, wheels the coffee cart around to the patients, takes water glasses to the kitchen, entertains children in the pediatrics ward, notes diet changes, and transports patients to the door. And sometimes, when back on the main floor, she helps in the hospital gift shop.

Anticipate Moods

Another candy stripper, moving enthusiastically from room to room, easily talking with the various patients, noted, "You get to learn through experience how to anticipate moods the minute you walk into the room. Somehow, I've gained a different outlook as to how people feel. It's such a wonderful feeling to know that you've really helped someone. I guess it all goes back to the feeling of importance that this work gives you."

Bev noted that the hospital staff entrusts the teenage workers with much responsibility. The staff depends on the girls to fulfill their appointed hours. When asked what the real motivating force was on those early drab mornings when anyone would rather sleep than go to work, especially to a volunteer job, Bev replied, "Well, it's my mother who motivates me, I guess. She's given me the determination to finish this project once I've started it."

Admitting that she likes to watch Ben Casey on TV, Bev said, "Once in a while they even have some Clad in her peppermint pinafore, Beverly Winkelman wheels a cart bearing morning coffee and sweet rolls down a corridor at Theda Clark Memorial hospital.

candy strippers on his program but I haven't seen any yet on Dr Kildare." When asked if she was keeping alert for an eligible doctor, single and young, Bev pertly replied, "Well — I really haven't met one yet!"

Candy strippers, becoming fast friends with patients and personnel alike, have close contact with the actual day to day hospital work. This gives them an unusual opportunity to experience the atmosphere of nursing while still high school students.

The peppermint striped frocks, owned and laundered by the hospital, are favorites throughout the hospital. Styled in an attractively simple and comfortable pattern, they seem to match the girls' sincere and cheery personalities. Over-all enthusiasm for the program is evident, for the girls feel that their hospital responsibilities come first, and when asked if they plan to return next summer as candy strippers, they reply as Bev did, with an emphatic, "Oh, YES!"

Filling water glasses with ice (above) is another of the jobs for which candy strippers are responsible. At left Beverly Winkelman displays a basket of assorted goodies from the gift counter, while working as a clerk in the hospital store.

Stationed at the main desk in the lobby, candy strippers such as Beverly, sort, number and deliver mail at Theda Clark Memorial hospital.

If 'Cleopatra' Fails,

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Officials at 20th Century-Fox, after $25 million and two years of filming between delays, is now praying that "Cleopatra" runs as long as it took time to make.

Studio executives are aiming at a $100 million gross but only if it gets finished.

"If this picture, which is now three-fourths done, doesn't get finished, it will be the end of 20th Century-Fox as a studio. It will make us the biggest parking lot in Beverly Hills," says one studio executive, who adds, "And I'm not kidding."

Tailgate Picnics for Autumn...

Summer may be slipping away by the calendar but good picnicking is not over yet. There are golden days of autumn ahead just made for the quick, tailgate picnic, the kind that gives a refreshing pause in a day's outing. Autumn is more of a gypsy time than summer, really, and tailgate eating can be fun at such events as the races at Elkhart Lake next weekend or for a fall scenic trip through countryside when nature is flaunting her best in scarlets, gold and browns. There are many sights to see before the first snow flies with waysides inviting and woodsy all along the way.

The best way to travel on sightseeing jaunts is to keep the picnic fare compact and simple in order to save most of the time for the event or tour. Follow the salad and sandwich theme, making both hearty and appetizing. Here are a few examples:

Bean-Shrimp Salad

- 1 pkg. frozen green beans
- 2/3 cup French dressing
- 1 can small shrimp
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 1 teaspoon tarragon

Cook beans, then add one-third cup of dressing. In another bowl, combine shrimp, onion slices, tarragon and remaining French dressing. Allow both mixtures to marinate for 30 minutes. Combine mixtures and pack into carton. The salad may be topped with a few additional shrimp for looks. Recipe serves two persons.

Anchovy Potato Salad

- 1 pkg. frozen peas
- 1 pkg. diced potatoes
- 2/3 cup French dressing
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
- 1 can anchovies
- Salt and pepper

Cook vegetables according to package directions. While still hot, add anchovies cut into thin strips. Add French dressing, minced garlic and chopped parsley. Season well with salt and pepper. Mix salad well. Cool before packing into cartons. Recipe makes two servings.

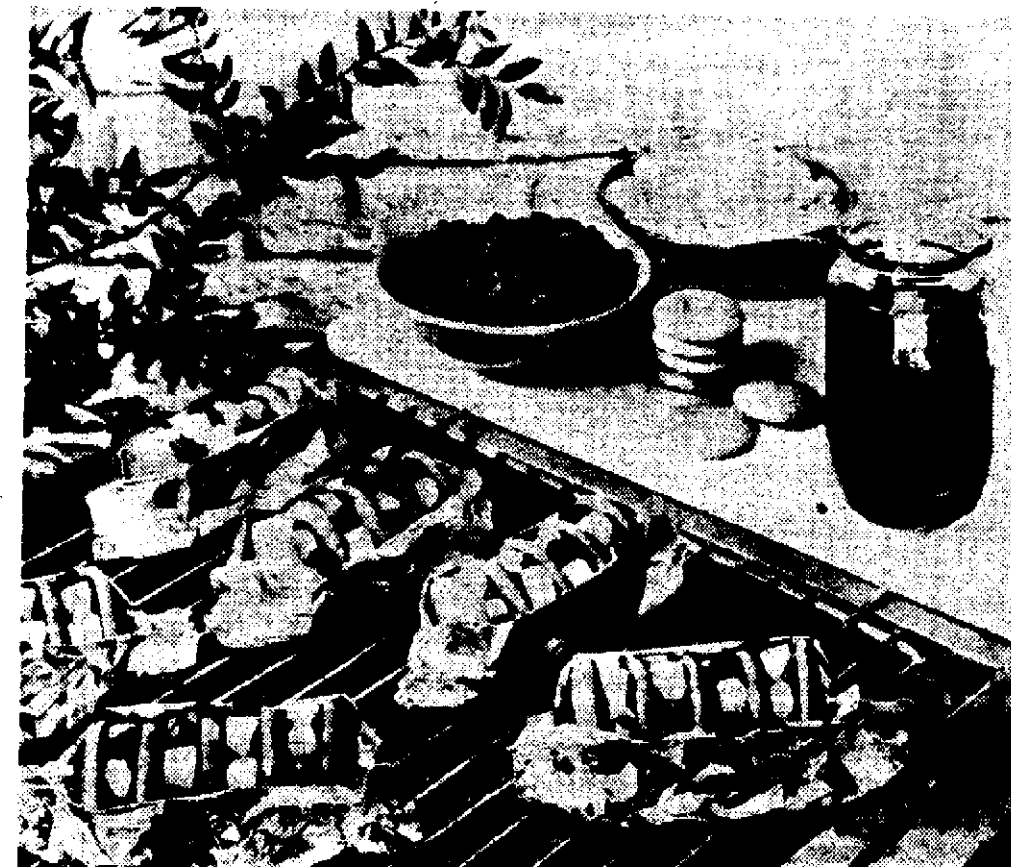

Dark pumpernickel bread filled with roast beef makes hearty sandwich fare that goes well with a robust salad, soda pop to drink and ready-made individual pies for dessert. Here, green beans and shrimp give contrast in taste and texture in a delicious salad, but others to try are the recipes for potato salad with tiny garden peas and anchovy strips or the macaroni and cheese dish in salad form.

Barbecue Dessert

A barbecue dessert that will appeal particularly to young fry on an outing is collection of Chocolate Barbecue Boats. A small fire is needed to make them... campfire, hibachi or barbecue grill... but they are a wonderful treat at a wayside picnic when fireplaces or grills are at hand. The materials include charcoal, aluminum foil and a supply of vanilla wafers, a jar of jam, miniature marshmallows and a package of semi-sweet chocolate morsels.

For each boat, prepare a foil container five to six inches long with one-inch sides. Pinch ends together. Stack five wafers, spreading each with jam. Place on their side in foil container. Top with marshmallows and chocolate morsels. Place foil boats over low heat. Cook for about 10 minutes, or until marshmallows and chocolate soften.

Picnic Special

- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 quarts boiling water
- 2 cups elbow macaroni
- ★ ★ ★
- 4 ounces diced cheese (process Cheddar)
- 1/2 cup sweet pickles
- 1 pimiento, chopped
- 1 tablespoon pickle liquid
- ★ ★ ★
- 1/4 cup salad oil
- 1/2 cup pickle liquid
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- Pepper to taste
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Cook macaroni in salted water. Drain, rinse in cold water, then drain again. Combine macaroni, pickles, pimiento and tablespoon sweet pickle liquid in bowl. Cover with transparent wrap and chill. Combine remaining ingredients on a pint jar. Shake before serving. Pour over macaroni mixture. Toss lightly.

MAHLER BEETHOVEN
Piano Sonatas No. 17 in D Minor and No. 18 in E-Flat Major; Clara Haskil, pianist. Epic LC 3831 (Stereo BC 1158).

Made in Switzerland shortly before Miss Haskil's death in 1960, these are mature and authoritative readings of great vitality. The pianist's touch is light and accurate, her tone firm and resonant, and the general effect is knowledgeable as well as relaxed. Sound is very fine but jacket notes, while accurate, Symphony No. 3 in D Minor; Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, with two choruses and the New York Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Columbia M2L (Stereo M2S 675).

Dedicated to Dmitri Mitropoulos, who died while conducting a rehearsal of the work at LaScala in 1960, this impressive album is a worthy tribute to both conductor and composer. It is also the first recording of the Mahler Third in stereo.

Despite its length, which has always handicapped performance, the symphony spreads a colorful variety of lovely music across a vast tapestry. Bernstein and his huge forces have lavished care and talent on the recording and so have Columbia's engineers. An album of high merit, beautifully prepared and presented.

Piano Sonata No. 23 in F Major (Haydn), No. 10 in C Major, K330 (Mozart), P-8584 (Stereo SP 8584). No. 13 in E-Flat Major (Beethoven); Leonard Pennario, pianist. Capitol.

An interesting and well played program that mirrors the development of the classical sonata from Haydn to Beethoven. Pennario, not generally associated with the heavier classics but a fine pianist for all that, does an exemplary job. If the Beethoven is careful, studied, even a bit tense, his playing is clean and accurate, while the Haydn is relaxed and perky, the Mozart fresh and free. Sound is excellent.

SWEELINCK
Variations on Popular Songs; E. Power Biggs, organist. Columbia ML 53737 (Stereo MS 6337).

Although Biggs plays these works with a formal touch and slight coolness that don't fit their 16th Century popular origins, he maintains their transparent texture impressively in fine organ tone. The sound is choice, with a pungent bite, and Biggs' own notes, while brief, are up to his usual standard.

The first 1963 model car to be announced out of Detroit, Ford's all-new Falcon Futura convertible sets a "sporty" pace. Combining its low silhouette with compact lightness and 170-cubic-inch engine performance, the new model offers a sports car flair while retaining the best economy features of Falcon. An all-vinyl, electrically operated power top and full-length divan-type front seat are standard. For the sports-minded a complete selection of optional equipment, including wire wheel covers, floor mounted 4-speed manual transmission and bucket seats, is available. This newest addition to Ford's compact line will be introduced in dealer showrooms Friday, September 28.

Stamps

Infamous Date Stamp Issue

Appropriate to this date is one of the most infamous stamps of all time. This Japanese issue of 1942 shows an aerial photograph of "Pearl Harbor Under Japanese Attack" — to commemorate the first anniversary of the "Greater East Asia War." Sept. 2 is the date in 1945 of the unconditional Japanese surrender aboard the U.S.S. Missouri. In the years since — by contrast — the stamps of Japan have been considerably less warlike. Typical designs these days are adhesives featuring pictorial scenes of placid parks, children at play, and even children's toys. It's a safe bet that the children don't get carried away with their toys as the Japanese belligerents did with their "toys" in the early 40's. Unfortunately, yesterday's friends may be today's enemies — just as our former Japanese foes are today's friends. (From W. R. Doberstein Collection.)

MALE CLOTHES-UPS
by BRAUER'S

Clothes that "give" as well as "take"? This possibility intrigues H.R. who writes:

"Recently I wore a jacket that's gotten tight and a friend remarked this may soon be a problem of the past. Said he'd read about clothes being made of fabrics that stretch. Sounds terrific. Anything to it?"

Men's fashions are becoming flexible in more ways than one! We now have stretch socks and other apparel is appearing with this feature. We're for any idea that adds comfort and this one will be interesting to watch.

If your dark blazer coat has ordinary buttons and you'd like to give it a lift, you might be interested in the suggestion we gave R.G., who writes us:

"Thanks for tipping me off to trying white pearl buttons on my blazer. Sure sets it off."

We understand T.E.'s enthusiasm for this jacket, but he'll enjoy it even more if he doesn't stretch it into a "jacket of all trades!"

"I've never enjoyed anything as much as a suede jacket I recently got. Any reason why I can't wear it to (1) Class. (2) Informal evening gatherings. (3) On dates. (4) Church on Sunday?"

(1) Fine. (2) Ditto. (3) For casual ones — neighborhood theaters, etc. (4) Not recommended. In other words, keep it on a casual basis.

WE'RE QUITE ENTHUSED —and think you will be, too —with the new look in shirt collars. The higher collar stance featured this Fall will add a smart touch to your outfit — with more "linen" showing. Stop by — for a glance at our complete selection in tabs, spreads and button-downs.

OH INCIDENTLY
Brauer's are loaded with the very latest in New Men's Fall Fashions. Brauer's are located at 228 W. College ave. in the A.A.L. Building.

Colorful sports cars, manufactured both in Europe and the United States, line up at the Northwestern Engraving Co. plant, Midway Road, Menasha, before starting on "The Rally That Really Counts," sponsored by the Fox Valley Sports Car Club. Holding the clip board is Pat Anderson, Clintonville.

A Rallying We Will Go!

After starting off (color picture, above), Mielke and Miss Lawler frequently checked their map and instructions. Later they paused to discuss time and distance instructions with other rallyists.

One of the delights of rallying is that, even though the driver may occasionally become lost, he still has the thrill of driving through beautiful and relatively unfamiliar country.

Miss America To Be Crowned This Saturday

A glamorous array of beauty and talent will parade on the nation's television screens from 8:30 until 11 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8, when the "Miss America Pageant" is broadcast live on the CBS Television Network from Convention Hall, Atlantic City, N. J.

The broadcast, climax of the annual quest for the ideal American girl, will include the grand finale of four nights of competition for scholarships and national fame by 55 girls representing the 50 states, plus an entrant each from the District of Columbia, New York City, Chicago, Puerto Rico and Canada.

All 55 contestants will be seen in evening gown and swimsuit competitions. Ten semi-finalists will present their talent act and five of this group, as finalists, will engage in a question-and-answer session later to display their poise, charm and personalities.

Crowning of Queen

The ceremonies will culminate in the on-the-spot selection of "Miss America 1963" and her crowning by this year's Miss America, Maria Beale Fletcher of Asheville, N. C. The theme of this 42nd "Miss America Pageant" will be "The Magic of Miss America."

For his eighth consecutive year, Bert Parks will serve as on-stage master of ceremonies. The special program will preempt "Gunsmoke" and "Have Gun, Will Travel" on the CBS-TV Network.

New songs, new entertainment features and, of course, new faces will contribute sparkle and glamor to the show. Bernie Wayne, who composed the familiar "Miss America Song," has written several new numbers for this year's pageant. They include "The Magic of Miss America," "A Very Special Girl," "Abracadabra Alakazam," "Goodnight, Everyone" and "Everybody Can't be a Winner."

The last selection will be sung by four state winners who were contestants in last year's competition—Frances Jane Anderson (Miss Arkansas), Susan Ann Henryson (Miss California), Linda Jacklyn Loftis (Miss Texas) and Carolyn Deann Lasater (Miss Utah).

Accomplished Dancer

Maria Beale Fletcher, "Miss America 1962," who will be on stage at the climactic moment of the broadcast to crown her successor, "Miss America 1963," will appear earlier in a talent role which contributed importantly to her winning the title last year. An accomplished dancer, she will serve as a partner for singer-dancer Bobby Van, who will be the only on-stage professional guest performer.

Backstage commentary will be contributed by a team of four former Miss America titleholders led by Marilyn Van Derbur (1958), who has served in other years in this capacity. In her group will be Mary Ann Mobley (1959), Lynda Lee Mead (1960) and Nancy Anne Fleming (1961).

The Miss America Pageant operates as a non-profit civic corporation in Atlantic City.

Bert Parks, as master of ceremonies, will have this group of "Miss America" titleholders for company during the two-and-a-half-hour "Miss America Pageant" live broadcast on the CBS Television Network from 8:30 to 11 p.m. Saturday. The beauties are (left to right) the currently-reigning Maria Beale Fletcher (1962), Mary Ann Mobley (1959), Lynda Lee Mead (1960) and Marilyn Van Derbur (1958).

Poems For Pretty Ones

Editor's Note—Next Saturday Miss America judges will make their annual decision on who's the fairest in the land. To set the proper intellectual atmosphere for this year's contest, state governors staged a poetry contest as a preliminary to the main event. Luckily for the girls, the verse from their sponsors will have no influence on official scoring.

BY HUGH A. MULLIGAN

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—All right already, so a pretty girl is like a melody. But she's something else again when it comes to prosody.

The governors of these several states found that out when they attempted to celebrate the charms of the current batch of Miss America contestants in four carefully hewn lines of gubernatorially conceived poetry.

Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, whose state lists among its natural resources the current Miss America, Maria Beale Fletcher, issued the challenge to a poetry contest among his fellow governors in a letter to entertainer Bert Parks.

"As the great search for her successor begins," Sanford wrote to the man who again will emcee the annual pageant on TV next Saturday, "we turn to poetry to issue this challenge on the other states:

"We throw down the gauntlet to every state:
Show us a beauty you think can rate
With Maria Beale Fletcher—Miss America
Sixty-Two,
And we'll gladly give up the crown to you."

Without perceptibly gagging, Parks passed the governor's poem and challenge on to the other states, adding a specification that the poems be limited to four lines.

One can imagine the lamps burning late in state houses across the land as the various chief executives toiled long and lovingly over their quatrains, polishing a line here, adding a beat there, finding the mot jus for that elusive combination of rhyme and meter.

Who knows what legislative plans went agley and what administration bills died aborning of vest pocket vetoes while the enraptured barbs tidied up their prosody and separated the iams from the dithyrambs, the trochees from the strophes?

As might be expected, several of the governors had difficulty staying within their four-line budgets. Leading deficit spender, verse-wise, was Gov. Elbert Carvel of Delaware, who took 11 lines to delineate the splendors of the Miss America entry from his tiny state. The result was a collision of Noel Coward and Gertrude Stein on a barren desert of scansion:

"Tis rather unfair
And not debonair
For gentlemen to compare
Ladies . . . however
If a Miss America
You must declare
With smiling eyes
And golden hair;
With beauty, charm
And talent to spare,
May we suggest Miss Delaware?"

Readers will note that all poems are reproduced here exactly as the governors wrote them, without sacrificing any of the original spelling, punctuation, line spacing or any other quaint exercises of gubernatorial poetic license.

Maria Beale Fletcher, "Miss America 1962," who will be on stage at the climactic moment of the broadcast to crown her successor, "Miss America 1963," will appear earlier in a talent role which contributed importantly to her winning the title last year. An accomplished dancer, she will serve as a partner for singer-dancer Bobby Van, who will be the only on-stage professional guest performer.

Backstage commentary will be contributed by a team of four former Miss America titleholders led by Marilyn Van Derbur (1958), who has served in other years in this capacity. In her group will be Mary Ann Mobley (1959), Lynda Lee Mead (1960) and Nancy Anne Fleming (1961).

Wet or Dry... Lloyd's a Star

BY ISOBEL ASHE

HOLLYWOOD — In her days as a movie mermaid, Esther Williams was doubtless emotionally wounded by the late Fannie Brice's immortal crack: "Wet she's a star; dry she ain't."

That fate didn't happen to Lloyd Bridges. He immersed himself in the various seven seas for 156 episodes of "Sea Hunt," dried himself off all the way to the bank, and this year finds him starring in an entirely new series on CBS television Tuesday nights (starting Sept. 11).

"I had no intention of doing another series," Lloyd says candidly. "I didn't want to be tied down again. Until I met with Aaron Spelling who created this show, and he sold me."

"The idea was so different, no one has even been able to put a 'label' on it. Or describe it with a phrase like situation comedy or dramatic adventure, which does come the closest," he concedes.

The so-called "indescible" show's format is this:

It is formally called Kaiser Presents the Lloyd Bridges Show. In it, Bridges plays a character named Adam Shepherd. He is a free-lance writer, working on some fiction for national magazines, as well as news stories. Occasionally he writes a novel.

But he doesn't stand in the wings and observe the story. In the opening of each half-hour episode, he is en route to cover the story, and then becomes the leading character in the story, an active participant, in other words.

"I am playing as many different people as there will be different episodes," he explains. "If you wanted to be wordy about it, you could call it an anthology role within a series."

"At any rate, I'm Adam Shepherd for only a few moments each week and then I go into all the other characterizations of the various scripts."

To date, Bridges has assayed a soldier of fortune, a Greek doctor, a corporal in the Confederate Army, a dude, a typical 'ugly-American' tourist, a southerner with a child genius. And there are still other widely diversified characters to be devised by executive producer Aaron Spelling.

If Bridges had any fears he'd been typed by his skin-diving role in "Sea Hunt," he figures audiences will forget his "wet" personality after watching the first new Lloyd Bridges show.

"People may well expect to see me in water on the first one. And they'll be in for a surprise, I suppose. I was widely identified from the other series, but it doesn't worry me. I've done plenty of other things in movies and on television to be too concerned about 'identification,'" he points out.

Bridges, a tall, slim blond with deep-set blue-green eyes is seriously introspective on only one subject: his acting. He has no desire to be a producer, a director, or a writer.

"Aaron Spelling is one of the best writers in this business," he says with satisfaction. "and that's a big help."

As Adam Shepherd, Bridges — himself a solidly married man (to the same girl with whom he went to college, he is noted) plays a bachelor.

"He won't get married. Let's keep him interesting. Now don't quote me on that — my wife would be furious! No, I'm kidding. I don't think marriage makes a person a dullard — that's within the person himself to start with, no matter what his marital status may be."

But as Bridges says, "There is no reason for Adam Shepherd to be married, nor any way a wife could fit into his life when he is working on stories all over the world."

In the new "Lloyd Bridges Show" over CBSTV, he plays Adam Shepherd, a writer, who, through his imagination, "lives" the main characters in the stories he writes. In this photo Bridges, center, is an American doctor visiting his father's native Greece.

New Southern Novel Verges On Caricature

Last Night the Nightingale, by Clifford Dowdey (Doubleday, $4.50).

Clifford Dowdey's new novel seems at times to partake of something akin to parody. The same breed of conventional post-Civil War characters has swarmed through the pages of Southern fiction for nearly a century, and a few of his "Old Plantation" folk residing at Bellevue are types so familiar as almost to verge on caricature.

The story is told by Ballard Edwards, an artist whose health was shattered during his four years' military service.

Resuming civilian life in the ancient and decaying Virginia manor house owned by his wife's family, Ballard finds himself frustrated and ambitious, unable to paint the pictures he dreams of.

Madeleine, his wife, is a self-willed and dominant Southern beauty who looks like a fairy princess but often acts like a wicked witch.

The whole connection of Madeleine's family, the once proud Cheswicks, huddle together in genteel misery at Bellevue. They are waited on by Old Elijah and Katy, faithful retainers, who can rustle up substance meals and serve them with decorum.

Dowdey writes knowledgeably of First Families of Virginia in economic decline and he describes poverty-stricken life at Bellevue in colorful detail. His attitude seems tinged with sectionalism. His prose is often poetic, always graceful; Poe-esque might apply describe many passages.

'Uncle' Gus Has Problems

The Uncle. By Margaret Abrams. Houghton Mifflin. $3.50.

His name is Gus Morton, his age 7, and he finds it upsetting to be an uncle.

One central fact—which didn't sink into his consciousness for a while—was that he had arrived in this vale of tears and double-talk when his parents were no longer young.

Gus bumped bruisingly into this fact when his sister Sally, her husband Wayne and their boy Tom came to the Morton household to live for a while. His nephew Tom was his own age. And not much of a pal.

This led to some jarring discoveries by Gus. It puzzled him that his parents might have committed some horrible indiscretion by having him when they were grandparents too. He got into the inevitable speculations about where babies come from. His own identification, as the psychologists say, was all mixed up.

There were further complications in the fact that

The Blue Nile, by Alan Moorehead (Harper, $5.95).

"The blue Nile pours very quietly and uneventually out of Lake Tana in the northern highlands of Ethiopia." From that deceptively calm beginning, Alan Moorehead's second volume about Africa's ancient river plunges into a bizarre and utterly absorbing popular history that tumbles along like the blue Nile itself and carries the reader helplessly with it.

As in the case of "The White Nile," substantial portions of this book appeared first in the New Yorker. But those who read the chapters piecemeal will find that the stories gain greatly in sense and continuity in book form. In addition to many illustrations, there are helpful foldout maps.

In 289 pages, Moorehead obviously cannot do more than sketch the comings and goings of explorers and conquerors from the middle of the 18th century to the present. But, by using the technique of swooping down on a pivotal moment in history and pinning its central characters in place for intensive study, he manages to create a narrative that avoids the weaknesses of a too detailed approach.

Impersonal Forces

Without ignoring the impersonal forces that seem to drive world events, Moorehead brings his accounts into focus by concentrating on the fantastic figures who have dominated the blue Nile's past: the Scotsman James Bruce, that misunderstood prima donna whose discoveries were jeered at for generations; Napoleon; Murad Bey and the improbable race of warriors known as the Mamelukes; Muhammad Ali and his 10,000 Albanians; Field Marshal Lord Napier, and the ambiguous Emperor Theodore of Ethiopia.

The clash between Napier and Theodore is one of the most outlandish episodes in African history. The punctilious British career soldier, invading the jungles of Ethiopia with the most modern army that could be imagined at the time, complete with elephants brought from India, comes face to face with the strangely appealing figure of Theodore, savagely cruel, unpredictable and more than half mad, yearning for recognition and respect from the conquering white man.

It is one of Moorehead's virtues as a writer that he is able to point up the symbolism of such a confrontation and its relevance to contemporary events without belaboring the point pretentiously.

For the general reader, it is hard to imagine that a more enthralling book on Africa will be written for some time.

DONAL J. HENAHAN

Sally and Wayne—whom Gus admired—weren't getting on too well. Sally was the city type and Wayne the ranch type.

Gus manages to find his way through these complications. The interest in this short novel lies in the acute understanding which the author has in the realm of boyhood. She writes with clean style and heady perception, and her story is the kind that touches the reader.

The 'Hoax' That Didn't Happen

BY DON KAMPFER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

STOCKBRIDGE — There really wasn't gold in the spring on my farm, said old "Bill" Pingel, but it sure caused a lot of talk for a time.

The crude hoax to boost land values described by the 91-year-old Stockbridge native was plotted on land Pingel farmed for 72 years before retiring a year or two ago.

One of the village's senior citizens and an avid historian, Pingel recalled the incident that happened early in his youth. A man named Maxwell owned a farm with a bubbling spring and creek just southwest of the village, he said.

Then one day in the 1880's a rumor that Maxwell discovered gold in his creek near the spring raced through the pioneer settlement. Helping spread the rumor and fan the "gold fever" of Stockbridge residents was a man named Darling. Like Maxwell's, Darling's given name evades the elderly native.

'Windy Fellas'

"They were both pretty windy fellas," Pingel commented, and had some of the less informed people believing the story. But wiser heads among the villagers soon spiked the rumors. The farm was sold at a normal price and Maxwell and Darling haven't been seen hereabouts since, said Pingel.

Several years later Pingel bought the farm. He never found gold but never really looked, he said.

The spry oldster and his 84-year-old spinster sister live in a neat white house near the village's construction limits. Pingel claims it is the oldest dwelling in the village.

It was originally of log construction, but now has clapboard siding. "The home was 25 to 50 years old when my father bought it 85 years ago," Pingel said.

Born in 1871

William Pingel was born June 24, 1871, in the old Stockbridge Hotel, then owned by his father, Frederick. He attended high school at Stockbridge, a fact of which he is fiercely proud, for few sons of German immigrants went beyond the grades in those days.

This pride is evidenced by the fact he has preserved his high school workbooks. The neatly entered ledgers, daybooks, etc., from a high school book-keeping or business class are stored in a century-old chest in a gray and weather-beaten shed behind the house.

He has a few other relics of the past. One is his father's wooden leg. The senior Pingel lost his leg at the knee in a farming accident and, with a talent for woodcraft, fashioned his own "peg." Pingel recalled, "He could climb a ladder carrying a bundle of shingles on his back with that wooden leg," he added.

Because his father was less than a good businessman — "he lost the hotel and everything else," Pingel recalled — the high school studies took on added importance. He passed up a chance at teaching because there wasn't enough money in it and went into dryline business first, then farming.

Award Diploma

Stockbridge High School was not a diploma awarding school when Pingel attended but three years ago when the school observed its 75th anniversary he was awarded a diploma at the celebration. "A little late," he quipped.

Bill sits in the sun now during the warm summer afternoons. An old canvas army folding cot on the front lawn is his favorite perch. He is living in the world of today, but his thoughts and heart are with the past.

Memories of childhood are revived for "Bill" Pingel, 91, as he pages through a high school workbook he has preserved for more than 70 years.

An old but workable hand pump still stands beside the Pingel home, supplying water for the elderly farmer and his sister. Pingel is active despite his 91 years.

"Bill" Pingel sits at the site of the spring which, many years ago, was subject of a cruel hoax perpetrated by a land speculator.

Summer Best Time to Build Home Roads, Walks, Paths

BY RAY PAGEL

Roads, walks and paths essentially are a means of getting from one place to another. In the yard and garden, however, they can serve the additional purpose of enhancing the natural beauty of the surroundings.

Summer is an ideal time to put your plans for any such construction into effect. The soil base is relatively dry and settled, and routine garden chores do not demand a great deal of your time.

Don't build a walk just for the sake of having one. It should look as if it belonged there, serving a useful purpose. Remember, too, that while a straight line may be the shortest distance, curves properly placed are much more attractive.

Wide Choice

You have a wide choice of materials. The decision will depend somewhat on the kind of walk or path you have in mind. What you want to spend also will be a factor.

Flagstone is excellent and attractive. You can use it for a simple stepping stone path to a pool or at the edge of flower borders. It is ideal, too, for more elaborate walks where an informal effect is desired.

You'll find flagstone rather expensive to buy if you need a great deal. Maybe, however, you can find enough by getting permission to raid stone piles on nearby farms. Also remember that a flagstone walk is not laid in a day; it takes a lot of fitting and fussing to get it looking right.

A good substitute for flagstone is broken concrete in varying sizes.

Brick from wrecked buildings is fine material if you're looking for something cheap and don't mind the work of knocking off the old mortar. Brick can be laid in standard patterns, or you may want to invent your own design. You'll find it easy to handle, and it stays put for a long time if you do the job right.

Garden Centers

Many garden centers carry the tile in various sizes and colors. This is primarily a material for a formal type of landscape. It is also excellent material for patios where you want a smooth surface but don't care for a broad expanse of concrete.

Don't overlook wood blocks, which provide the most natural effect of all pavings. Old railroad ties are a good source. It would be a good idea to use a chemical preservative to prolong the life of the wood.

Short-Haired Pointer Good Selection for Bird Hunter

The great speed theory did not work out too highly and the Shorthair is probably the slowest of the Pointers. He offers much in its stead, works closer to the gun, works a territory thoroughly, has much common sense and a strong tendency to be steady to wing and shot, and the coat and swimming ability to do a fine job in the duck blind when such is demanded.

The young lady representing her breed for this article is Frau Frinch and works for the gun of Walter Finch of 318 Alcott St., Neenah. She and her boss have recently migrated up here from Illinois and both were active in the Shorthair Club and trials there. Both hope for a chance to hunt and run trials up here and will tell you all about it at the slightest provocation. They are both nice to know; meet them and see.

Let's EXPLORE Your Mind

No. Sacrificing yourself for someone else is often a sign, not of love, but of neuroses. Parents who sacrifice themselves for their children are more likely to spoil, than to benefit them. The good parent shares himself with the children, and expects them in turn to share themselves with others. People get along best, and there is most love, when there is a mutual give and take.

Yes, say students of the subject. People can dream either in color or in black and white. We still do not know just who or how. Would artists dream in color more than others? Or do colors represent personality types, or the strength of your emotions, or different kinds of emotions? Why don't you watch your dreams, to see whether or not you dream in colors or when?

True. A person may kill himself so that his relatives and friends will feel guilty for the rest of their lives. He also hopes that they will be disgraced in the eyes of their friends and neighbors--"She was so mean that she drove him to his death." Those who harbor hatred in their hearts usually hurt themselves for more than they do anyone else.

Cool Weather Greet's Shawano Fair Opening

SHAWANO—Wet grounds, chill the fair made its initial appearance before the grandstand patrons. Teen-agers and youngsters were doing most of the patronizing of rides and concessions while their elders for a large part looked over the expositions. Most of which were in the preparatory stage or stopped to talk with acquaintances.

It is hard for a county resident to attend the fair in his county and not bump into people he or she knows but hasn't seen since the year before. First competition offered at the fair consisted of an informal horse show with 22 entries as part of the Shawano County 4-H Club riding horse project, started three years ago. Interest among rural youngsters in riding horses has increased. According to Don Schoedel 4H agent. From an entry of seven in 1960 and 15 in 1961 to 22 in this year's show.

After checking the baled hay, the father left and it was then that young Stoller lit a cigarette and threw it into the mow, he told Kewaunee County authorities Friday afternoon. After the fire started he notified Blahnik's daughter, Evelyn, who called the Ahnape Fire Department.

4-Day Investigation

Schwabe and Kewaunee County Police Chief Darwin Legois, conducted the four-day investigation which resulted in the apprehension of Stoller on Friday.

Destroyed along with the foot barn were 200 tons of hay, a combine, baler, tractor, milk barn early Monday morning, house, grain wagons and a bull.

Stoller also admitted setting fire to a rural Algoma farm home four or five years ago.

No Electric Wires

The authorities were called in to investigate the fire after it was reported that the blaze started in a section of the barn which housed hay that was cured a year ago and where there were no electrical wires.

Schwabe confirmed a report that Stoller had called his father, who lives on a nearby farm, to combine, baler, tractor, milk barn early Monday morning, house, grain wagons and a bull.

Watchdog Dead but Burglars Have No Luck

OSHKOSH — Burglars wasted no time taking advantage of the situation but failed to come up with any loot anyway.

Friday night the watchdog at an implement company on U.S. 41 at State 44, south of Oshkosh, was killed Saturday morning burglars entered the building and ransacked the office. Nothing was taken.

OSHKOSH — Five cars of the Manitowoc-Fond du Lac Soo Line freight train were derailed early Saturday morning when the train crossed an open switch in the line yards south of 20th Avenue.

Little damage was caused in the accident, according to a Soo Line spokesman although two of the cars had to be cut apart before they could be moved. The accident, which happened on one of the yard "set-out" tracks, did not disrupt main line service.

A seven-car and wrecker work train, sent from Stevens Point, arrived about 5 p.m. Saturday and employees hoped to have the wreckage cleared by midnight Saturday.

Dist. Atty. Harold Fager said that Stoller was being held on an open charge pending further investigation. The area fire marshal, Earl

Space Official Discusses Program At State College Science Meeting

BY JAY REED

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

DRUMMOND — America's Man in Space program is in good competitive shape despite Russia's spectacular advances in space exploration of recent weeks.

This reassuring appraisal of the sensitive race for space was made here this week by James Connors, assistant to the director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Lewis Research Center in Cleveland, Ohio.

2. A system of cooperative county-state zoning to prevent misuse of shore land.

3. Regulation of dumping areas to prohibit their location in flood plains.

4. Specific rules governing sewage disposal facilities used by boats and extension of present boat pollution regulations to all lakes and rivers.

Effective Controls

5. More effective controls on the location of new wells and sealing of abandoned wells to prevent spread of pollution.

6. Stepped up cooperative efforts between industry and state government to promote modern and effective methods of disposing of industrial wastes.

7. Greater research into the causes and prevention of pollution.

8. Better pay for state pollution control personnel.

9. Greater state assistance and guidance to local sewage plant operators to obtain maximum results from sewage treatment facilities.

Legal Definition

10. Broadening of state's legal definition of pollution to include water harmfully affected by industrial heating processes, unnecessary situation from construction and grading projects, and dumping of radioactive materials of any kind.

Dr. Gordon Drake, candidate for the Sixth District congressional seat held by Republican William K. Van Pelt, urged Democrats to get their names before the voters.

He said he made a random poll in Oshkosh, selecting one name from each page in the telephone book. Of the 65 people called, he said, 46 could not name any of the congressional candidates. And only 13 knew who the incumbent was.

Drake's primary opponent, John Race, Fond du Lac, charged Van Pelt has "never done anything for anyone." He said he advocated a tax cut for the lower and middle income groups.

Other candidates to speak included Herbert Pitz, senate candidate; Rufin Skiba, Third Assembly District, Patrick Heppner, register of deeds; James Witkow, county clerk; and Dr. Paul Whyte, coroner.
